Legislature begins special session

Evans told to stay away

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Republican leaders refused to let Democratic Gov. John Evans give a formal speech to lawmakers at the opening of the Idaho Legislature's special session Monday.

It was an unprecedented snub of the state's chief executive.

The GOP leaders said they were trying to eliminate formalities so the extra session — called by Evans despite opposition by Republican lawmakers — could be concluded more rapidly.

"The governor has already gotten his message over to the people and we don't want to drag this session out," said Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise.

"The public is getting disgusted with this circus," House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, added. "They think we're piddling around."

Evans reportedly was "incredulous" about the leaders' decision to bar him from the legislative chambers, and legislative Democrats blasted their GOP counterparts for the unorthodox move.

"He was incredulous," said Pat Costello, Evans legal adviser, who witnessed a meeting of legislative leaders and the governor in which the "no-speech" announcement was made.

"He was more astonished than angry," Costello said.

The gubernatorial aide said it apparently was the first time in the state's history that a governor was denied an opportunity to speak to a joint session of the Legislature.

Risch noted that Evans didn't address lawmakers at the beginning of the special sessions he called in 1980 and 1981.

"An examination of our history reveals that we've never had a (governor's) 'State of the State' address in the special session," Risch said.

But Costello said it still apparently was the first time that a governor who formally asked to give a speech was turned away from the legislative chambers. Evans wanted to repeat his plea for more education funding for fiscal 1984.

"It's a very poor precedent to set," Senate Minority Leader Kermit Kiebert, D-Hope, complained after he learned of the GOP leaders'

Lawmakers: Lobby hurt

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Despite intensive lobbying by educators, most Magic Valley residents do not want the Legislature to spend more on education next year, area legislators say.

Most delegates from the Magic Valley report that was the message contained in the phone calls and letters they received prior to Monday's special session. One House member said his letters and calls were 50 to 1 against increased funding for schools.

In fact, some lawmakers believe that the campaigning done by Gov. John Evans and the Idaho Education Association for increased school spending has angered taxpayers.

"I've received a good number of calls, and not one person asked me to vote for more funds for education," said Rep. Vard Chatburn, R-Albion.

This surprised him, he said Monday, because many called him — often long-distance — who never had done so before in his 27 years in the Legislature.

"Most of these people normally support our schools," he said. "But I think the extra hard push by educators has backfired on them. I think it's going to take some years for educators to regain their credibility."

Calling the push for education funds "a web spun in Ada County," Chatburn said that the "more moderate" Cassia County teachers in his district may have been hurt by the drive, and that the district's override levy, which has passed annually, may be in jeopardy this year.

Another District 26 lawmaker, Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, said most of his callers asked him "to hold the line on spending" because business and farming have had such a poor year.

"If we come back next winter and there is extra money sitting in the treasury, then I'd be delighted to put it into schools and ag research" said Darrington, a Burley schoolteacher. "But right now, let's use whatever money we get to pay off our debts."

Darrington was referring to the $19 million extra the state may receive by June 30 — the end of this fiscal year — according to the state treasurer and the State Tax Commission. In response to the unexpected revenue, Evans has asked the legislators

Idaho Legislature

BOISE — The Republican-controlled Idaho House thundered through a five-hour special session Monday, passing education budgets identical to those vetoed last month by Gov. John Evans.

But a drive toward final adjournment in the Senate stalled amid blocking tactics by the minority Democrats.

GOP lawmakers in the House used their overwhelming numbers to suspend rules for the immediate consideration of major funding bills and other measures, sent the proposals to the Senate and rushed themselves to final adjournment.

However, in the Senate, Democrats had enough votes to block suspension of rules, which requires a two-thirds majority. As a result, normal procedures must be followed to process the six bills, so Senate adjournment can't occur until Wednesday.

Evans called lawmakers back to Boise to consider his requests for $13.2 million in additional funding for education. He wanted legislators to tap an estimated $19 million revenue gain which the Idaho Tax Commission identified last week.

However, Republican leaders said the new funds should be used to retire the state's fiscal year 1983 debts. Therefore, the House voted to return to Evans the same fiscal 1984 allocations he vetoed after the 95-day regular session: $215 million for public schools, $70 million for higher education, $13.4 million for vocational education and $8.5 million for agricultural research.

The House also passed bills to remove flaws from new laws cracking down on drunken drivers and raising the Idaho gasoline tax by 2 cents per gallon.

In addition, representatives approved measures authorizing the state to retrieve $4 million in overpaid Social Security contributions to the federal government, streamline state administrative procedures and earmarking any fiscal 1984 surplus funds to be used to repay accounts legislators raided to balance this year's budget.

The House voted 38-31 to adjourn at 7:30 p.m., five hours after the special session convened.

House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, said the session was a waste of time, but moderate Republicans and the minority Democrats warned adjourning ahead of the Senate could cause constitutional problems.

Rep. Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, the House minority leader, warned legislators may end up being embarrassed by repeating an incident in 1980 in which the Senate adjourned but the House refused to go along with the action and senators were forced to return to Boise.

Senate President James Risch, R-Boise, tried to persuade Democrats to immediately pass the six House bills and end the session. But the Democrats refused to suspend rules and the upper chamber broke off its business until Tuesday.

"This special session is just absolute and total nonsense," Risch said during debate, taking a slap at Evans. "For pure political purposes, for us to be up her spending the taxpayers money is foolishness."

Earlier, Stivers estimated it was costing the state $11,000 each day the Legislature was in session.

But, in response to Risch's comments, Sen. Gail Bray, D-Boise, said refusal by legislators to increase the state appropriation for public schools would cost the taxpayers more money.

She said local school districts would be forced to seek property-tax override levies which could run into millions of dollars this year.

Conservative Republicans said the programs will survive while the state digs its way out of fiscal problems over the next year or two. But Democrats and moderate Republicans said the schools must have more money now to prevent severe declines in program quality.

Reagan asserts values

ASHLAND, Ohio (UPI) — President Reagan attacked his familiar targets of big government and social spending schemes in a strong defense of his conservative beliefs Monday night.

"Out of the best of intentions, government has intervened in areas where it is neither competent nor needed, nor wanted by the mass of America," Reagan said, making a brief stop in Ohio on his way back to Washington after visiting California, Arizona and Texas.

The occasion was a fund-raising memorial dinner at Ashland College for Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who died last year. The college is establishing a library and public affairs center dedicated to the Republican lawmakers.

Reagan laced his speech with references to Barry Goldwater's ill-fated 1964 race for the White House, and it sounded as if the president were seeking votes in chastising his liberal foes for social programs that have gotten out of hand at the expense of the average worker.

Depending on big government, he declared, is "the central political error of our time."

"Instead of seeing the people and their free institutions as the principle means of social and economic progress, our political opposition has looked to government and bureaucracy as the primary vehicle of social change," the president said.

Former Ohio Gov. James Rhodes introduced the president at a private reception of state Republican leaders and predicted Reagan would run and win in 1984.

Thatcher calls for elections

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Monday called national elections for June 9, a year before her term ends, hoping to triumph with her popularity from the Falklands war and Britain's improved economy.

"I never make colossal claims but I'm cautiously optimistic about the result," Mrs. Thatcher said in a radio interview.

"I would think that during the lifetime of this government this country has regained confidence and self-respect at home. I believe overseas we are held in high regard and admiration ... it's not a bad record for a renewal of mandate from the people."

The election campaign will be just under four weeks, giving the opposition Labor Party and the Social Democratic-Liberal alliance little time to wipe out the commanding lead of Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative Party, which now stands at between 8 and 13 points in opinion polls.

Bookmakers made the Conservatives the hot 1-4 favorite to win Mrs. Thatcher a second 5-year term, with Labor listed at 5-2 and the Alliance a 33-1 long shot.

Mrs. Thatcher, Britain's first woman prime minister and a close political ally of President Reagan, put an end to six weeks of rumors with a brief announcement from her No. 10 Downing ... Elizabeth II had agreed to her request to dissolve Parliament Friday, opening the way for new elections.

Woman shot, husband sought

WILDER (UPI) — Police in Canyon County say a man who allegedly shot his ex-wife apparently has left the area and is trying to reach relatives in Washington or California.

Wilder Police Chief Steven Degitz said an all-points bulletin had been issued to officers in those states and Oregon for Ricardo Paz of Wilder.

County Prosecutor Richard Harris said officers from several agencies were looking for Paz in connection with the shooting about 7:45 a.m. Monday of Linda Garcia, 24.

Ms. Garcia was shot twice following an argument while she was outside her apartment, said Harris.

He said Paz was identified as the assailant by the victim, who was shot in the cheek and thigh and was taken to Caldwell Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Swedes spot sub's periscope

SUNDSVALL, Sweden (UPI) — Swedish navy helicopters spotted the periscope of a midget submarine in the bay north of Sundsvall where a trespassing submarine has been hunted for nearly two weeks, a naval source said Monday.

The Defense Ministry refused to confirm the report.

An informed naval source said the sighting was made inside the Klingerfjarden bay where two mines were exploded May 4 at what was thought to be a Soviet midget submarine.

"The search is kept up with unreduced intensity," said Defense Ministry spokesman Maj. Bengt Sjoholm.

"We are still working on our theory that one or more submarines are in the area," he said. "Sooner or later we will get something out of there."

While the navy kept up its hunt for the submarines trespassing near the sensitive Sundsvall harbor, a joint Soviet-Swedish sea rescue maneuver in the Baltic sea was launched.

Magnet is cancer treatment

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An experimental treatment that uses magnets to draw cancerous cells out of bone marrow to prevent the spread of cancer has been used for the first time on a human patient, researchers disclosed Monday.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in suburban Pasadena, where the technique was developed, said it was used April 25 in London to treat a 22-year-old man suffering from neuroblastoma, an often fatal type of cancer.

The man was reported in good condition Monday but researchers said it would be three weeks before it could be determined if it was successful. They emphasized the technique was intended only to prevent the spread of cancer — which is carried through the body in the bone marrow.

The technique, used in combination with conventional chemotherapy, relies on magnetic "immunomicrospheres" — or beads — of polystyrene plastic to cleanse the bone marrow of cancer cells.

Liver found for transplant

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A team of University of Minnesota doctors flew to Florida Monday to retrieve a donor liver for transplantation to a dying 11-month-old girl from Cahokia, Ill.

Hospital officials said surgeons left the facility about 4 p.m. Monday and were expected to return to the Twin Cities with the liver and begin the 12-hour operation later in the evening for the girl, Amy Hardin.

Amy's blood type is AB negative, so she could accept a liver from almost any child, said her father, David Hardin.

Amy's aunt, Cindy Roark, 21, of Cahokia, Ill., said Monday the donor liver was from a 10-month-old Tallahassee, Fla., baby who died in an accident. She said the victim's family had given permission for the transplant.

"Because the (donor) liver is bigger, they may have to remove Amy's spleen, which they say won't hurt her, but it will make the liver fit," Miss Roark said.

Canfield High is state's best

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — Canfield Junior High School has been named Idaho's "Distinguished Public Secondary School," Coeur d'Alene School District officials say.

The school now will compete for top national honors against 42 other award-winning schools, Canfield Principal Jerry Welsetth said recently.

He said Canfield was honored following detailed evaluations of school achievements by two Idaho committees.

Evaluations included analysis of student achievements and performances on national standardized tests, as well as accomplishments by teachers and administratorsm, he said.

The principal said Canfield, which is one of two junior high schools serving the northern Idaho city, will host a visit by national educators within the next month.

Chinese secure hijack accord

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Resolving last-minute disputes that had held up an accord, China and South Korea signed an agreement Tuesday for the return of more than 90 passengers and crew members of a hijacked Chinese airliner.

A government spokesman in Seoul said the passengers and crew who have been kept in South Korea since Thursday would leave for Shanghai Tuesday aboard a special plane.

The nine-point pact permitting more than 90 passengers, crew and jet to go back to China was signed by Shen Tu, head of China's national airline CAAC, and Kong Ro-myung, South Korea's first assistant foreign minister.

The memorandum did not refer to the fate of six Chinese hijackers who shot their way into the cockpit of the jetliner on a domestic flight from Shenyang to Shanghai Thursday, wounding two crewmen.

Willie takes country award

Alabama was named entertainer of the year for the second straight year and won honors as top vocal group for the third year in a row.

"Please don't get the impression we didn't work for these awards," Randy Owen, one of three cousins in the group, told reporters. "It's only been three years since we left a small club. We've been at this for 13 years, but this year and last year we finally made a little money to take care of our families."

"Always on My Mind," Nelson's remake of an old Brenda Lee song, was named both album and single of the year.

"I want to thank all the people traveling up and down the highway playing music," he said in accepting the top album honors.

Ronnie Milsap was named top male vocalist. Nelson was a loser in that category, and he and Waylon Jennings lost as top vocal duo to David Frizzell and Shelly West.

Merle Haggard won two Hat trophies as composer and singer of "Are the Good Times Really Over?" which was named song of the year over "I'm Gonna Hire a Wino to Decorate Our Home," "Nobody," "Ring on Her Finger, Time on Her Hands" and "She Got the Goldmine, I Got the Shaft."

Sylvia was named top female vocalist.

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" won the Tex Ritter Award as best country movie of the year.

Chet Atkins, a master guitarist and former head of RCA records, he signed both Jennings and Nelson to a contract in their early days — was given the Pioneer Award honoring "outstanding and unprecedented achievements" in country music.

'Latigo' bows out, 'Teenie' is in

TWIN FALLS — "Teenie," a new comic strip by Jerome artist Geoffrey Marble and his daughter, Tristan, has replaced "Latigo" on the comics page in The Times-News.

Stan Lynd of Red Lodge, Mont., the creator of "Latigo," a Western cartoon, decided to discontinue the strip due to a decline in the number of newspapers subscribing to the cartoon.

A story on Marble and his daughter, which explained the changes in Friday's Times-News, apparently was not seen by several readers who called Monday to express concern and outrage about the disappearance of "Latigo."

Against

to use the money to increase appropriations for public schools, higher education, vocational programs and agricultural research.

But almost all Magic Valley delegates support the Republican position that the money should be used to pay off the loans that were used to balance this year's $70 million state deficit.

"I think we have to pay off some of our debts because it will help us get our financial house and credit ratings into better order," said Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert.

Included in those debts are tax-anticipation notes, plus loans from state funds, such as the water pollution control and building funds.

After those loans are repaid, any unappropriated money then should go to colleges and universities before the public schools, Antone said.

Reps. Antone, Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, and Mark Larson, D-Mountain Home, were the only Magic Valley delegates who opposed Monday's move in the House to keep educational appropriations at existing levels. That measure passed 40-30, and now moves to the Senate for concurrence.

"I agree our debts need to be addressed," Knigge said. "But unless we pump more money into these education budgets, there will have to be layoffs. We can't wait until next winter's session to give them more money."

However, Knigge did not favor giving the public schools more money — only higher education, vocational programs and agricultural research.

"In this year's budget, public schools got 46.2 percent of all state general funds," Knigge said. "By giving the same dollar amount next year, they'll eat up 47.5 percent, with other areas like colleges and universities taking the rap."

Kelly, however, argued that during the regular session of the Legislature, which ended in April, many Republicans said they'd give the public schools more money if it could be done without raising taxes.

"Now, we have at least an extra $16.5 million that we can count on, if not the whole $19 million," said Kelly, a Mountain Home schoolteacher. "The Legislature should be responsible enough to give at least $10 million to public schools and $5 million to the other budgets."

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, echoed Kelly's remarks, but he also stressed that by using the unanticipated revenue to increase school appropriations, lawmakers actually could provide some property-tax relief.

"Last year, there were at least 42 override levies proposed and over 70 percent of them passed," Peavey said. "By giving schools exactly the same dollars to cope with increased operating costs, you're ensuring at least that many overrides again this year and maybe more.

"By appropriating this extra money to schools, you're accomplishing tax relief," he said. "You're spending state money to relieve pressure on local property owners who'll otherwise have to pick up the tab, via override levies."

But one of the most outspoken opponents to the stand advocated by Peavey was Rep. John Brooks, R-Gooding, who chairs the Legislature's Revenue Projection Committee.

"I don't think we're going to have the $451 million we've already appropriated for next year," Brooks warned. "I think when we come back next January, we're going to be staring at another shortfall — maybe $35 million or $40 million.

"We talked to the Tax Commission just before the session ended in April, and they didn't say a word about this extra revenue," he said. "I don't think their figures are correct. I don't see that (tax) receipts are going to continue improving into the next fiscal year."

He said that his constituents have been calling in 20 to 1 against giving schools any more money. Likewise, Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, said that his calls were running 60 to 2 against an increase.

Reporting similar public pressure were Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, and House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, who reported ratios of 30 to 1 and 10 to 1, respectively.

refusal. "Maybe they will reconsider, and I hope they will. Someday the shoe may be on the other foot."

But top Republicans did not back down. When Evans sent copies of his speech to the House in letter form, Majority Leader Jack Kennevick, R-Boise, won a request to bypass reading of the message.

Giving the governor speaking time "is just a simple courtesy," House Minority Leader Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, said. "This has never before happened in 90 years. It would probably take less than 30 minutes. It just seems ludicrous to me."

Jean Terra, Evans' press secretary, said the governor was prepared to give a speech of seven to eight minutes in length.

While the body of the message to legislators repeated Evans' controversial requests for $13.2 million in boosted education funding, it began in a conciliatory tone.

Justice wants more timely executions

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UPI) — The 38 states with death penalty laws should abolish capital punishment if Congress and the courts cannot find a way to process appeals more quickly, Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell said Monday.

Powell, speaking to the second annual conference of the 11th Judicial Circuit, said the delays are "unfair to the hundreds of persons confined anxiously on death row."

"Moreover, it undermines public confidence in the system of justice and the will and ability of the courts to administer it," he said. "Unless the courts discharge their duty to move effectively to address this problem, the legislatures of the several states should abolish capital punishment."

Powell voted with the majority in the court's historic 1976 decisions reinstating capital punishment. He also refused last month to block Alabama's execution of John Louis Evans III, the seventh man to be put to death since capital punishment was restored.

He called the 1,163 inmates on death row "an intolerable situation," noting that many of them were sentenced as many as five and six years ago. About a third of the death row inmates are in prisons in the 11th Circuit, which includes Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Capital punishment cases usually are litigated for years because inmates can challenge their sentences in both state and federal courts.

Powell was the fifth Supreme Court justice to support the creation of a new, high-level judicial panel to lighten the high court's workload.

Bell wants bigger salaries for better teachers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary Terrel Bell called on teachers unions Monday to back a proposal for recognizing outstanding teachers with extra pay.

"I think teachers are underpaid, but I also think we should change the method of paying our teachers," Bell said during a CBS Morning News interview on what can be done to improve U.S. education.

Bell was asked whether he agreed with some suggestions that teachers unions have hurt American education.

"Well, I don't know that they've been totally harmful," he replied. "But I think their insistence that we pay teachers all on a single salary schedule rather than a differentiation where we can recognize our most distinguished teachers" has hurt.

"That's what I would like to see happen," Bell said. "I have been touting a master teacher pay scale on top of the regular salary schedule for our outstanding teachers. I'd like to see the teachers union go along with that, if we could persuade them."

"They may be willing to do that," Bell continued. "You know, we do that in higher education. You can work up to the rank of full professor.

Activists group tests standing court rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A small group of social activists told a wary federal judge Monday they have a constitutional right on religious grounds to remain seated in court when the bailiff commands, "All rise."

U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer listened to arguments in a case brought by the Community for Creative Non-Violence and scheduled a resumption of the hearing May 23, saying he is leery of telling other judges how to run their courts.

"It's a management problem," Oberdorfer said. "How could you administer such a rule in New York's drunk court, where you have a hundred drunks?"

But Mark Venuti, attorney for the Washington-based non-profit group, said, "The issue is whether people can be compelled to show respect for a judge when their religious convictions tell them they should not pay homage to anyone but God."

Six District of Columbia Superior Court judges are defendants in the action, which began when a member of the community and a friend were ordered jailed in October 1981 for refusing to rise when Superior Court Judge John Hess entered the courtroom.

Hess sentenced them to two days for contempt of court, but ordered them released after five hours.

In most courts, a clerk or bailiff asks spectators to stand when a judge enters or leaves the courtroom.

During Monday's hearing, Oberdorfer agreed courts "must create an opportunity for conscientious objectors to claim their right to relief from the all rise order," but he said, "I recoil at fashioning a rule telling other judges how to run their courts."

"This involves a principle that would apply in courts from Tucson to New York," he said. "How big are all those courts, how many spectators do they have, what kind of cases are heard?"

Candida Staempelli, attorney for the defendants, said there is no reason for any new rules, such as amending the "all rise" order to exclude conscientious objectors or setting aside special seats for them.

"Judges are reasonable human beings," she said.

Farm exports down once more

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — U.S. agricultural exports in March dropped 14 percent in value and 8 percent in volume from the same period a year ago, the Agriculture Department reported Monday.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the value of the 1 million tons of U.S. farm products exported in March totaled $3.2 billion.

"Lower wheat and corn shipments accounted for most of the decline," the report said. "Lower prices for wheat and soybeans (compared to March 1982) also contributed to the decline in total export value."

But the agency noted that the export price of corn continued to gain strength, as it did in the five preceding months, while the export price for wheat dropped from its February level.

For the first six months of fiscal 1983, which began last October, U.S. agricultural exports dropped 17 percent in value from the same period of fiscal 1982 to $18.1 billion, the report said. Exports were down 7 percent in volume to 79 million tons.

The agency blamed smaller wheat shipments for most of the decline.

In March alone, wheat exports dropped 18 percent from their levels one year earlier to 3.6 million tons, partly because of smaller shipments to the Soviet Union and China, the report said.

Corn exports in March dropped 10 percent in volume from March of last year to 4.3 million tons, the report added. The $120 per ton price was reported unchanged from the previous year.

Soybean shipments in March rose 7 percent to 2.3 million tons, partly because of larger sales to Japan and Mexico, the report said. Export prices of soybeans were down 7 percent from the previous year, the report added.

The value of U.S. agricultural imports in March increased 4 percent over the same month one year ago to $1.4 billion, the department said. For the first six months of the year, imports were valued at $8.1 billion, up 5 percent from the first half of fiscal 1982, it said.

The agricultural trade surplus in March was $1.8 billion, down 24 percent from March 1982, the report said. For the first half of fiscal 1983, the surplus was down 29 percent to $10 billion.

Bankrupt farmers protest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two bankrupt farmers wheeled into Washington Monday, driving an old tractor and pulling a manure spreader, marking the end of a 33-day trip from to protest Reagan administration farm policies.

"Tony and I have lost our farms," Peter Brent, 44, of Menlo, Iowa, told a news conference outside the Agriculture Department office building where they parked their rolling demonstration.

"The government keeps putting out these figures and these press releases that say there's no problem," he said. "We hope to draw attention to how there is a problem."

Brent and Tony Bos, 47, of Tracy, Iowa, also towed an outhouse and a barrel along with the manure spreader on their trip, which covered back roads in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The barrel bore a sign: "If your debts are free and clear, you can stand right up and cheer. But if like us you've lost your rear, toss your shorts right in here."

Brent and Bos said they had mailed the White House several hundred pairs of shorts, contributed by farmers along their route.

Board should watch what's going home

We see nothing wrong with the Twin Falls Education Coalition attempting to influence people on its view on school funding. After all, the coalition, mostly teachers and administrators, has an obvious interest in the subject.

But we think it is inappropriate for school children to be used as a lobbying vehicle for literature that advocates a cause or advances a particular perspective.

That apparently is what happened last Thursday and Friday. School children in the Twin Falls School District were given identical notes from their teachers to take home. The one-page flier was signed by the "Twin Falls Education Coalition" and was addressed "Dear Parents."

It asked parents to write a letter to their state legislators, whose names were provided, urging them to appropriate more money for education during the special session of the Legislature.

"Send the letters back to school on Friday with your children," the flier said. "We will see that they are delivered on Monday to Boise." The flier suggested three alternative funding measures for parents to support: advancing corporate income-tax collections, stepping up to a 5-cent sales tax and using "an appropriation from newly earned tax monies."

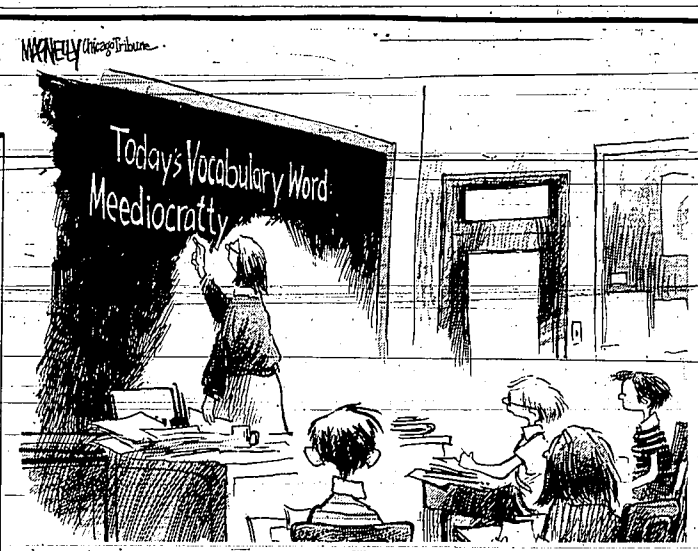
School officials have taken the position that distributing such literature is all right as long as it only advocates that people get involved in the democratic process and does not promote a point of view.

This flier appears to violate that guideline. It openly describes itself as a "plea for your support." While technically correct in claiming, "Right now there is no funding for schools next year," we think the flier invokes a scare tone in such a remark, which is distorted and unnecessary.

The flier caught the attention of a number of parents who called The Times-News to say they objected to being "lobbied" through their children in this way. In at least one instance, we were told, a teacher told students which programs likely would be "cut" if no more money is appropriated this year.

We think parents are right to object to having their children used as information vehicles in such lobbying campaigns, and we think the school board should tighten its policies.

The only information that should be going home with children, except of course their knowledge, are grades and information that is directly school-related, such as PTA material, school policy changes and the like. The list shouldn't include material from an education lobby. Parents are fully capable of making such decisions for themselves, without having their kids be the bearers of the teachers' and administrators' position.



Suspecting a bit of cribbing

Ellen Goodman

Suddenly all the essay questions are being turned in at the same time.

Maybe it's the season for this sort of thing. After all, finals are just around the corner and there's grading to be done.

This year it appears that the great American take-home question for the spring semester is about the state of our schools. The answers we are reading are similar enough to suspect a bit of cribbing.

First there was the National Commission on Excellence which declared: "Our nation is at risk." Then Albert Shanker, the president of the American Federation of Teachers, delivered his orals on the subject in front of the teachers' union convention.

Next, 41 governors chimed in with the National Task Force on Education for Economic Growth. Finally, the Twentieth Century Fund followed up with their own announcement that, "The nation's public schools are in trouble."

By September yet another report is expected from the Carnegie Commission and no less than 24 studies of secondary schools are currently being completed.

The only good thing the rising "tide of mediocrity" seems to have produced is a flood of page one, cover story, nightly news attention. There hasn't been this much energy concentrated on the quality of schools and schoolteachers since the Russians sent up Sputnik in 1957.

But none of the authors suggest why we go through these cycles of attention and neglect to academic excellence. After all, there were isolated cries about the dire state of education in the late Seventies, just as there were in the pre-Sputnik Fifties.

Why do we only occasionally feel ourselves in a crisis and develop a consensus for reform?

I don't think it's because of some surprise competition, whether from the Russians in outer space or the Japanese in high tech. Nor do I agree entirely with the governors, who said, "We have expected too little of our schools over the past two decades and we have gotten too little."

We have had great expectations of the schools, but not always as teaching institutions. As Pat Graham, dean of Harvard's school of education and a member of the Twentieth Century Fund group, says, the decline in our academic standards and our attention occurs when "the outside world is asking the schools to do something else. It's quite common for schools to be asked to play many roles aside from simply academic learning."

The "something elses," the list of things we asked of the schools in the era that followed the Sputnik brigade, was not always frivolous. It was long and often honorable. The schools played a role in desegregation and in access for the handicapped.

In fact, a great many Americans rose on that "tide of mediocrity." As Myron Atkin, dean of the school of education at Stanford University, admonishes: "We can't lose sight of how much leveling up there has been."

In this same post-Sputnik, pre-Sonynik era, we were asking the schools to function while authority was being undermined. The confidence of many adults — parents and teachers alike — faltered in the late Sixties and Seventies. As Dean Graham remembers, "Schools had been in the posture of telling kids what they should think and how they should act. Their authority to do that was seriously eroded."

This spring, the reports coming out reflect — more than they announce — our enormous discontent with our children's impoverished education. We have cycled back again, after years of neglect and are looking at learning.

A spiral of hostilities between teachers and parents, union actions and government budget cuts may have calmed. At least these reports from all fronts offer many of the same conclusions: Attract higher quality teachers with higher salaries, institute longer school days and longer school years, toughen up subjects and students. There is nothing flashy here, just solid and sensible advice. Authority is back in style, so is learning.

The next question — for extra points, please — is how to keep our attention focused on excellence when we don't have a magical, instant answer. Today, the decline of the American school system has replaced the decline of the American family as our concern-of-the-year. But as graduates of this system, we are known for a short attention span.

Appreciates article

Allow me to commend the Times-News for its timely article, regarding the Gooding County Memorial Hospital and particularly the editorial comment of May 6, 1983. This editorial, I think, shows a good deal of insight into one of the many complex problems which beset the Gooding County Memorial Hospital at this time.

Unfortunately, the Gooding County Hospital Board does not appear to have as much objective insight into this and other problems, while generally choosing to ignore the consensus advice of the Medical Staff.

On numerous occasions, I have expressed my concern to the Hospital Board that we, the medical staff and the Hospital Board, must work together in solving our problems. This seems to be more and more difficult to do.

One way to be happy

The world would be better if everyone were nicer. Even a little bit nicer would help. People would like the world better because they wouldn't have to worry so much. School would be much more fun and so would everything else that we do. People would also be a lot happier.

For the world to be nicer, people could talk things over instead of fighting or arguing. We could help other people with things they needed help with. They could give money, food, or clothing to people who don't have those things but need them. People could stop being so rude and smart-alecky and do the things parents and teachers tell them to do.

There are some things people shouldn't do, like talking back and taking over things. You should let other people do things too. You shouldn't interrupt but listen to what someone else has to say, then you can talk. Don't disobey rules or don't call people names. Most people don't like to be called names. You also shouldn't hurt people or break any or their property. Don't make people mad by teasing them or by anything else like that because it isn't nice doing that.

If everyone were nicer than everyone would enjoy doing their jobs, like teachers would enjoy teaching more and parents would enjoy doing more things with their kids and for their kids. I think kids would like it too.

People should be kinder to animals. If people respected animals more, then animals would respect people more too. Animals might live longer and not be extinct so soon. We could stop hunting birds and fish for game and not shoot any animals unless you have to.

I know it's hard to stop doing the things that you're used to doing, and start doing things that are nicer than what you did before, but we all could at least try. You could start by being just a little bit nicer each day until you're as nice as you can get.

Art Buchwald

When educational scores plummet in the United States everyone tends to blame the school teachers.

But this is too easy. The average salary for a teacher, after four years of college and taking special courses, is $17,000 a year. Because many school teachers have to moonlight at another job to stay alive, they're not getting enough sleep to be sharp in the classroom.

I became aware of this when I took my nephew to dinner the other night.

"Look," he said. "There's my English teacher."

"Where?" I asked

"He's your English teacher?"

"Sure. Hi, Mr. Peterson."

"Hello, Michael." Peterson said to my nephew. "What brings you here on a school night?"

"My uncle is taking me out for my birthday. How did I do on my English test today?" Michael asked.

"I haven't been able to mark it yet. We had a big party of lobbyists from the American Banker's Association and they've kept me running. What would you like to order?"

Michael studied the menu and said, "What gives with the Oysters Rockefeller?"

"Nothing gives with the Oysters Rockefeller, Michael. Oysters Rockefeller cannot give. You must ask, 'How are the Oysters Rockefeller?'"

"Well, how are they?"

"I would recommend them."

"Okay, I'll take a shot at them."

"Come on, Mr. Peterson. Don't ruin my birthday."

"I'm sorry, Michael, I forgot my place. As a waiter I shouldn't correct you."

"Hey, Mr. Peterson. Is that Mr. Alfredo, our science teacher, in the white jacket carrying all those dirty dishes?"

"That's correct. He's a busboy here, but as soon as he gets his master's degree in biophysics, I'm sure he'll become a waiter. The manager of this restaurant has had very good luck with the teaching staff of Warren Harding High School. As an alumnus, he tries to hire as many of us as he can. Miss Bellows, your math teacher, is the hat check girl, and Mr. Fallows, of the Phys. Ed. department, is the bouncer in the bar."

"Is it degrading to work as a waiter at night and a school teacher during the daytime?" I asked Peterson.

"Oh, I don't ever tell anyone I moonlight in the daytime as a school teacher. If you let people know you're a teacher they tend to think you're wasting the taxpayer's money. But if you tell them you're a waiter they feel you're doing something worthwhile."

"You teachers have a tough life," I said.

"It could be worse. Most of the staff at Herbert Hoover High School work the night shift at National Airport for Federal Express. They never get any tips."

We gave our order, and after Peterson left I said to Michael, "Is he a good teacher?"

"Better than most. You know John Hanrahan, the kid I play football with? Well, he and his parents discovered his French teacher, Mr. Dubois, was working in a gas station. Dubois forgot to put the gas cap back on their tank, and John's parents were so angry when they got home, they called the principal of the school and demanded Dubois be fired, because they said they didn't want their son to be taught French by someone who didn't even know how to pump gas."

"Was Dubois fired?"

"No, because fortunately the principal had done the same thing at the gas station he was working at the night before."

We finished our dinner and asked Peterson if he could call us a cab.

He told us it would be no problem. "I'll call Mrs. Thompson, Michael's homeroom teacher. She hasn't had a fare all night long."

Not how much, but where it's from

Clay F. Richards

More than $1 billion was spent on American elections in 1980, about twice what they cost in 1976.

Herbert Alexander, head of the Citizens Research Foundation, which makes the definitive study of campaign finance costs every four years, estimates the 1982 elections, even without the president on the ballot, probably cost $1 billion.

But he says that sum is not a big expense to elect public officials from dog catcher to president.

What is of greater concern is where the money comes from.

Uncle Sam is biggest contributor to political campaigns. In 1980, the government spent about $100 million in matching funds for presidential primary candidates, financing the Democratic and Republican national conventions and all the expenses of the presidential candidates in the general election.

One would think that political parties would be the next biggest contributors, and up until 1980, that was the case. But for the first time in 1980, political action committees spent more than the parties.

PACs spent a total of $95 million, while state, local and national political parties combined spent $89 million.

Groups like Common Cause have declared PAC money evil and issue frequent reports tying contributions by these special interest groups to the voting records of the members of Congress who get the money.

But the evil is not necessarily PAC money. The evil is that we spent more money gambling on a football game than electing public officials.

Part of the problem is the election reform laws enacted in the wake of Watergate. In 1974, Congress passed [illegible] buying influence and suggesting individual contributions.

PACs were just getting started 10 years ago. So Congress said special interests could contribute up to $5,000 each to a campaign while an individual could give only $1,000.

It's time for Congress to re-examine those limits, along with the restrictions on what can be given to and given by political parties. The cost of political advertising and travel — the two main expenses of any campaign — have risen drastically since 1974 and the old contribution limits are no longer realistic.

As Alexander says:

"A better method of offsetting the development of PACs without unduly restricting their growth or limiting their contributions would be to increase the $1,000 individual contribution limit to $5,000 and repeal the $25,000 overall contribution limit for individuals" to all campaigns in an election year.

"This approach not only would compensate for the damaging effect of inflation on the ability of individuals to participate financially in political campaigns, it also would begin to counterbalance PAC contributions and reduce financial pressures on candidates by providing them alternatives to PAC donations."

Action on budget stalled in Senate

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT
United Press International

WASHINGTON -- The deadlocked Senate began a second week of debate on the 1984 budget Monday with Democratic leader Robert Byrd urging Republicans to accept a cap on the July 1 income tax cut and tighten military spending.

Byrd criticized the Republican majority for not giving Democrats a role in shaping the budget, and declared there has been no shift in Democratic opposition to a GOP compromise budget plan to break the legislative logjam.

"I don't think there's anything on this side to slip. It doesn't satisfy us," he told reporters.

"Unless those deficits are cut, the economic recovery is going to be aborted."

The $850.4 billion GOP plan offered last Thursday by Senate Republican leader Howard Baker and Senate Budget Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., would preserve the 10 percent tax cut, which is set to start July 1 and adamantly supported by President Reagan. It also would increase military spending 7.5 percent in 1984 and 5 percent in 1985. Reagan originally wanted 10 percent growth in military spending.

The GOP compromise would result in annual deficits of $192.4 billion in 1984 and $186.3 billion in 1985, Republican leaders say.

Byrd noted Reagan has made it clear he would veto any repeal of the $30 billion, 10 percent income tax rate reduction due to take effect this summer. As a "fallback" to cut the deficit he proposed a cap, "which would allow everybody to get some kind of a tax cut and would help reduce the deficit."

A GOP Senate budget official said, however, putting a ceiling the income tax cut at a maximum of $750 per taxpayer, or limiting the cut to those earning less than $50,000 would raise only $7 billion additional revenue, and the smaller rate of increase in military spending would raise only an additional $1 billion.

Byrd also said military spending should be tightened. But he refused to specify what the increase in military spending ought to be -- "7, 6 or 5 percent, I would not attempt to set a figure."

Senate Armed Services Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, a strong advocate of military spending, said in an interview Monday he could accept the 7.5 percent figure in the GOP substitute.

When debate resumed Monday, Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., proposed setting an increase of 6.5 percent in defense spending in 1984, 5.5 percent in 1985 and 5 percent in 1986.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., said he would introduce an amendment to trim the budget by cutting $2 billion from the Energy Department's nuclear program and $880 million for foreign weapon sales.

Administration argues for 'squeal rule'

By BARBARA ROSEWICZ
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A Reagan administration lawyer urged an appeals court Monday to reinstate a controversial birth control rule, arguing parents need to know about their teenage daughters' decisions on sexual activity.

The regulation, branded a "squeal rule" by opponents and blocked before it was to take effect Feb. 25, would require federally funded clinics to notify parents within 10 days if girls under 18 are prescribed birth control pills, diaphragms or intrauterine devices.

"Parents quite naturally should be involved in the balancing of risks and benefits (of birth control) and can help in that process," government attorney Carolyn Kuhl told the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Laywers for family planning groups insisted teenagers who are sexually active would be "frightened away" from clinics if they knew their parents would be told.

The result would be more teenage pregnancies -- already more than 1 million a year -- and more abortions, unwanted children, "ruined lives" and billion-dollar increases welfare costs, warned John Nields, of the National Family Planning and Reproductive Health Association.

The government is trying to overturn an injunction imposed by U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery of Washington against the regulation. Another federal judge has issued a similar injunction in New York.

It is not known when the three-judge appeals panel will rule on the case, which pivots on how far the Department of Health and Human Services can go in writing regulations for federal family planning programs.

About 5,000 clinics nationwide would be covered by the birth control rule, and officials estimate it would affect more than 400,000 girls.

Miss Kuhl, a Justice Department lawyer, told the court, "If one steps back from the emotional issues ... it is absolutely clear that the secretary of Health and Human Services had the authority to issue the regulation."

She cited amendments to the family planning law in 1981 that say clinics that get federal money "shall encourage family participation." Before, minors were encouraged to tell their parents, but the policy was not written into law.

In sharp questioning from the bench, Judge Harry Edwards indicated he still sees Congress' chief purpose for spending money on family planning as cutting down on teenage pregnacies.

Congress approves tough anti-tampering law

By DON PHILLIPS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate, approving almost identical measures in swift succession Monday, voted to make tampering with food and drugs a federal crime with penalties up to life in prison.

The bill was prompted by the deaths last fall of seven people in Chicago who took Tylenol poisoned with cyanide. No one has been charged in the case, which prompted several copycat poisonings and attempted poisonings in the next few months.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the Tylenol deaths and the resulting copycat crimes around the country "have seriously undermined public confidence in the safety of consumer products and have sent chills through respected manufacturers all over the country."

The legislation passed the House 292-0 and later in the day a companion bill was approved by voice vote in the Senate.

The bills will now go to a Senate-House conference where the slight differences will be resolved.

Watt says U.S. needs 'Christian revolution'

LYNCHBURG, Va. (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt told Liberty Baptist College graduates Monday the United States is a "hurting nation" that needs a Christian revolution to restore political liberty and spiritual freedom.

Watt exhorted 570 graduates and 5,000 spectators at the school founded by Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell to "make a difference, whatever it takes."

Watt said "the religious left" has taken over the government, educational experimenters have taken over schools and the courts and legislatures are run by those who "would seek to destroy life for the convenience of others" through abortion and mercy killing.

"It's a hurting nation, a nation that needs help," Watt said.

History showed us that in many ages and many lands "the heavy hand of government has crushed liberty," Watt said. "There is one force that would snuff out spiritual freedom, and that is excessive government."

Watt did not elaborate on "the religious left" during his commencement speech and departed immediately after the ceremony.

JAMES WATT
Addresses graduates

Watt was the third major Reagan administration official to speak at the college in the last month.

Vice President George Bush thanked Falwell April 12 for taking up the administration's crusade against the nuclear arms freeze. On April 20, Education Secretary Terrel Bell praised LBC's curriculum mix of religion and education.

Jogger finds mastadon tusk

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — Researchers said Monday a mastodon's tusk, believed 10,000 to 20,000 years old, has been found washed up on the Virginia Beach oceanfront, apparently the first such find on the Atlantic Coast.

Virginia Beach resident Ernest Ball said he was jogging along the beach last month when he noticed the tusk, described by scientists as "remarkably perfect."

The tusk is 38 inches long, four inches in diameter and weighs about 35 pounds.

"I knew there weren't any elephants living around here," said Ball, "so I suspected that it was a fossil of some sort."

Dr. Frank Whitmore, a research geologist with the U.S. Geological Service and a research associate at the Museum of Natural History in Washington, said the recovery of a complete tusk along the Atlantic coast had never been reported previously.

"I think it could only have been uncovered for a few hours," said Whitmore.

Church to give Galileo new hearing

By PHILIP PULLELLA
United Press International

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II, in an indication the Vatican may overturn the 1633 condemnation of Galileo, said Monday the astronomer who held that the Earth revolved around the sun was the victim of "regrettable" errors and misunderstandings by the church.

"We certainly recognize that he suffered from departments of the church," the pope told 200 scientists, referring to the Vatican's heresy condemnation and sentencing of Galileo Galilei for his theory that the Earth was not the center of the universe as had been believed.

Galileo, one of the most distinguished scientists of his time, was condemned by the church's inquisitors for "vehement suspicion of heresy." He was forced to recant and spent the last eight years of his life under house arrest.

The pope told the members of the "Science for Peace" group in Rome for a convention on Galileo, that the work of a Vatican commission reviewing the condemnation "was progressing very encouragingly and there are good grounds for hoping that it will make an important contribution to the examination of the whole matter."

The commission, acting on orders from John Paul, began its work in 1980. It has been the Vatican's first review of the 17th century case against the famed Italian astronomer-physicist-mathematician, which became a symbol of centuries of conflict between science and faith.

"We cast our minds back to an age when there had developed between science and faith grave incomprehension, the results of misunderstandings or errors," the pope told the group, which included 30 Nobel Prize winners.

"We should rejoice together that the world of science and the Catholic Church have learned to go beyond those moments of conflict, understandable no doubt, but nonetheless regrettable.

"The church's experience, during the Galileo affair and after it, has led to a more mature attitude and to a more accurate grasp of the authority proper to her," he said.

Central to Galileo's hearing in 1633 before the Holy Office, the Vatican department in charge of the Inquisition, was a fear that science might disprove the literal truth of the Bible in an age when most churchmen believed that every word of the Holy Scriptures was true.

Galileo's findings disturbed churchmen who literally believed the sun and moon stopped over the valley of Ayalon to give Joshua and the Israelites time to vanquish the armies of five kings. (Joshua 10: 12-15)

Galileo was the first man to use a telescope to study the skies. He developed his theory from calculations made 90 years earlier by Nicolaus Copernicus, the Polish scientist who studied at the University of Krakow, the city where John Paul was once archbishop.

In his address to the scientists, the pope said the church should not be faulted for its decision on Galileo because the knowledge of churchmen was "limited" by the times in which they lived.

The pope gave no indication when the Galileo commission would present its findings and recommendations.

Sick flower-seller hassled by police

On Sunday, the 63-year-old widow tried selling chrysanthemums to raise money for critical radiation treatments, but police threatened to take her to jail in handcuffs because she didn't have a license to sell flowers.

A day later, enraged residents and even police officers who heard of her plight offered to donate money to help pay her medical expenses, authorities said.

"We may have stopped her from selling the flowers in the first place, but we're not all bad," said Officer Diana Morrissette. "We have to enforce the law, and sometimes the police are caught between the devil and the deep blue sea. But we don't want to hurt anyone, especially on Mother's Day."

Police, city officials and newspaper offices were deluged with calls Monday by residents who wanted to send money to Mrs. Viccica.

Ms. Morrissette said the Fraternal Order of Police had agreed to contribute an unspecified amount to help defray her medical costs.

Mrs. Viccica, who lives on a $295 monthly Social Security check, said she is in need of radiation treatments but can't afford them. She used up her $500 in Medicaid benefits earlier this year and has been unable to get her benefits increased.

Mrs. Viccica's daughter, Lorraine Viale, came up with the plan to sell flowers on Mother's Day.

"I was so happy," Mrs. Viccica said. "I thought, if I could just get maybe a couple hundred dollars, I could start my treatments."

Mrs. Viccica bought $200 worth of mums, expecting to reap $600 by selling bouquets for $3 each.

Early Sunday, she and her daughter set up shop outside a memorial park. In less than two hours, they had sold $48 worth of flowers.

But then Officer Joseph J. Halleran pulled up and asked Mrs. Viccica for her occupational license. When she said she didn't have one, Halleran gave her a ticket.

"I showed him the letter from the doctor and tried to explain I never sold flowers before and I was just trying to make money for my treatments," she said. "He told me to pack the flowers and go home. He was so nasty, I got hysterical."

A second police car cruised by while she was packing and another officer threatened to handcuff her and take her to jail, Mrs. Viccica said.

"I mean, have a little class," said Ms. Viale. "Tell her to go home. She's an old lady. Treating her like a criminal just isn't necessary."

Forbidden to sell the flowers, a crestfallen Mrs. Viccica gave some away and put the rest on the graves of strangers.

SINATRA'S PAY

Frank Sinatra's new contract with the Golden Nugget hotels in Las Vegas and Atlantic City is for a staggering amount of money over a three-year period, although the exact terms were not disclosed. But Lee Solters, publicist for Ol' Blue Eyes, offered some idea on how much the crooner is taking home. "Let's just say that Frank Sinatra always has been set for life," Solters said. "With the new contract, he's set for his next life, too."

ELVIS'S WATCH

Police in Niagara Falls, Ontario, have recovered a $75,000 diamond studded watch that had been made for Elvis Presley. Benjamin Richardson, 18, was charged with stealing it from a new museum dedicated to Presley. "We're really happy to get it back," museum manager Rose Primerano said. "It was the most expensive piece of jewelry here."

Mother gets a real surprise

VICTORIA, Texas (UPI) — Doctors had told Sylvia Martin she likely would have triplets, but she never expected to spend Mother's Day delivering quadruplets — three girls and a boy.

"We were expecting triplets," husband Kenneth Martin said. "They did some kind of examination and told us it would be triplets, but I guess everything was just so crowded in there they couldn't pick one up."

Mrs. Martin, 30, a Victoria high school math teacher, delivered what De Tar Hospital officials said were the city's first quadruplets early Sunday and doctors said all four were fine.

Hospital nursery supervisor Sharon Andres said Mrs. Martin also was in good shape.

"I think she's a little in shock, though," Ms. Andres said.

School statue creates flap

UTICA, Mich. (UPI) — An Oriental statue used as a good luck charm by the track and field teams at Utica High School is causing some bad vibrations.

Some parents — mostly of students in neighboring Ford High School — say it appears the 3-foot-tall Ho Tai figurine is being used as a religious cult figure. School officials say that's not true.

Meetings between the parents and school officials last year failed to put a stop to the 14-year-old tradition. Another meeting is scheduled for Tuesday.

"You have to see what goes on at the meets," said one mother, who asked that her name not be used because she feared retribution against her son, formerly on the Utica High track team and now attending Ford High.

"They dance around it and do flips and chant 'Ho Tai lives' and then they kiss the statue's belly," she said. "To me and some other parents it looked like they were worshipping the statue."

Officials fear election fraud

Gooding attorney wants probe

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

GOODING — A special prosecutor will investigate alleged election fraud in Gooding County's 1982 county commission race.

Prosecutor John Arkoosh announced Monday that he will ask Judge Douglas Kramer to appoint Keith Roark, the Blaine County prosecutor, to the post.

Arkoosh declined to identify who is the target of the investigation.

"If we're wrong, then we've damaged someone," Arkoosh said. "We just have some people that we suspect."

The investigation will focus on the three-way Republican primary battle for the county commission seat from Gooding County's Third District. Although behind in the initial count, a recount put Robert P. Thackeray of Wendell ahead by two votes over Everett Cox of Wendell. Kurt B. Alberti of Wendell finished third.

Thackeray went on to win general election in November.

"Our evidence leads us to believe that someone tampered with the election results," Arkoosh said.

Arkoosh said he will seek Roark's appointment within the next two weeks. He cited a conflict of interest in his decision to bow out of the case, but he declined to elaborate.

He was equally tight-lipped in explaining his choice of Roark for the post, saying only that the Blaine County prosecutor's experience with criminal investigations and prosecutions was a factor.

Under Idaho law, a county prosecutor can seek such appointment on his own from the district court. The county commissioners are obligated to finance such an investigation.

Arkoosh's plan became public Monday when he sought the commissioners' blessing. He didn't get it.

"He's moving on his own," said Will Thomas, the chairman of the county commission. Although his board was split on the issue, Thomas said he personally believes Arkoosh should assume full responsibility.

"I think in our case he can petition the court and possibly get a special prosecutor," Thomas said. "I'm not all that hep about funding the situation."

Arkoosh estimated the investigation would cost about $1,500. He didn't know how long it might take.

The investigation began when Arkoosh took office in January.

Both the Idaho attorney-general's office, which was called into the case in late January or early February, and Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja's office will work with Roark, Arkoosh said.

Health club shuts, locals lose money

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The sudden closing of a Twin Falls exercise gym and the unannounced departure of its owner has brought new customers to some businesses.

But it also has given the fitness industry in the area an undeserved black eye, owners of similar businesses say.

Critter Club, which was located downtown at 264 Main Ave. S., shut its doors April 2, after its owner, Earl E. Wood, left town without paying his bills or refunding membership fees.

Since then, a Twin Falls businessman, Bill Nichols of Exchange Enterprises Inc., has filed suit against Wood and attached his business possessions. Nichols and sheriff's deputies will enter the premises today to collect what remains, Nichols said Monday.

Nichols is seeking repayment for $14,500 worth of goods, interest and $4,800 in attorney's fees. Nichols hasn't found Wood yet.

But Ken Dahl, a local exercise buff, who lost $1,000 in wages, did for an hour last week. Working through an intermediary, he and Russ Wheeler, 17, of Twin Falls, met Wood on neutral turf in a Salt Lake City schoolyard, Dahl says.

The intermediary, a local resident named Tam Hollins, was edgy, says Wheeler. Wheeler had driven Wood's rented truck to Hollins' house when he left.

Wheeler said Hollins told him he had a revolver and had stationed four friends in a van at the schoolyard for protection. A van was there, but he never saw Hollins' gun, Wheeler says.

Dahl talked to Wood. "He said, 'I don't owe anybody any money . . . only the exchange,'" according to Dahl. When asked about club members who had lost memberships and other creditors, "He acted really sorry," Dahl says. "And, I think he is sorry about the whole thing . . . for one thing (that) he didn't confide in anybody to help save the situation." But Dahl never found out Wood's Salt Lake City address, he says.

Dahl and a partner, Tim Bennett of rural Twin Falls, who once considered starting a new club with former Critter Club members, now have abandoned that ambition, as well as one to start a new fitness business. They are waiting until October to see if there is a demand for a totally new gym during peak season, Dahl says. However, the business will not honor any former Critter Club memberships for legal reasons if it does get going, he says.

Meanwhile, those former members have been trickling through the doors of other exercise and weight-training operations in the area.

Steve DeWitt, the owner and manager of The Fitness Center in Twin Falls, has had 25 to 50 inquiries and

Salvation Army marks anniversary

By KELLY EVERITT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Salvation Army will celebrate 118 years of service to the world's needy this week.

Founded in 1865 by William Booth, a Methodist preacher who left his ministry to preach in the slums of London's East End, the social-service and religious organization now serves people in 85 countries.

The Salvation Army was founded "during the same time and conditions that caused Karl Marx to write "Das Kapital," says Capt. John Greholver of the Twin Falls Salvation Army office.

But Booth, "who looked similar in appearance to Marx, said that you could only change the world by changing men, one by one. He saw a need for compassion for the needy," Greholver says.

Believing in the trinity of the Christian faith, "the Salvation Army sees itself as part of the church as a whole," Greholver says. "My orders (from the national leadership) say I am to serve the (Christian) churches of my area. We do not see ourselves as apart from other churches. We are a servant to all. In Christ, we are one church anyway."

Working in cooperation with area churches, the Salvation Army provides much of the "hands-on" assistance to the needy in the area that other churches may not be organized to provide. But, he says, "I get a lot of support from virtually every church. We have helped people from every denomination."

Among its many activities, the Salvation Army administrates several relief programs, such as the Idaho Power Co.'s "Project Share," which solicits donations to subsidize the heating costs of the poor; serves as a referral service to direct persons to the appropriate government, religious or private welfare agencies; offers support services for persons trying to deal with drug or alcohol problems; and through the Booth Memorial Home in Boise, provides educational and vocational training for unwed mothers waiting to have their babies.

Greholver also has begun a program for people "who just need a friend, someone to listen to them." He often will either counsel that person himself or refer such persons to volunteers organized for that purpose.

He also has created an outreach program to help lonely senior citizens in nursing homes and, as funds allow, provides them with Easter or Christmas gifts.

In addition, the army provides its own informal worship services at 11 a.m. each Sunday at its headquarters at 801 Second Ave. N. in Twin Falls; offers camping opportunities for youths during the summer; free music lessons to youths each Friday evening; provides assistance for the hungry; and operates its thrift centers, where used clothing and other items are sold for nominal sums.

And the Twin Falls corps, which covers the entire eight-county Magic Valley area, does it all with only seven paid staff members. The rest of its work is handled by scores of volunteers from area churches or its own membership.

"We have a slogan," Greholver says: "Heart to God, hand to man."

"Our No. 1 concern is God and his concern for our world. But his love is practical. He rolls up his sleeves and goes to work.

"I believe this is our unique quality. We seem to be able to serve God in an effective way, on behalf of the other churches.

"We are on the front line. We get a lot of people that fall through the cracks" of government welfare and social-service agencies.

For example, he says, a new family in town waiting for its first paycheck may not have enough money for food until that check arrives. The Salvation Army can provide a voucher that can be redeemed at Norm's Cafe or Kentucky Fried Chicken in Twin Falls.

Featherston arraigned, stands trial in August

GOODING — A Jerome businessman pleaded innocent Monday to charges that he forced his way into a Wendell woman's home, attempted to harm her and then tried to rob her.

The defendant, 37-year-old Dan Lee Featherston, will go on trial Aug. 2. He has been charged with burglary, battery with the intent to commit a serious felony and attempted robbery.

If convicted, Featherston could face up to three 15-year prison sentences.

Featherston, who operates insulation businesses in Jerome and Pocatello, remains free on $25,000 bond.

The charges against him stem from reports of an attack upon a Wendell woman at her home on Dec. 8.

Two charges of aggravated assault in connection with the incident have been dismissed, following a preliminary hearing early last month.

Following the Fifth District Court arraignment Monday in Gooding, Judge Douglas Kramer denied defense attorney Eugene Fredericksen's request to release Featherston without bond.

Earlier this year, Featherston was charged in Jerome County with a series of crimes, including rape. But the charges were dropped after a preliminary hearing in February. Magistrate Judge Daniel Huributt ruled the evidence was not sufficient to bring the case to trial.

Agency to begin cheese distribution today

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Volunteers are an important part of the program to help low-income families

TWIN FALLS — Beginning today, free cheese again will be distributed to low-income families in the Magic Valley.

This year, however, the South Central Community Action Agency is distributing the 33,600 pounds of cheese at fewer locations.

At one point, the agency had 22 distribution sites last year. But because of staffing and funding cuts this year, the agency has cut the number of sites to 14, says Carrol Cliett, the agency's services coordinator.

SCCAA receives no money from the federal government to distribute the five-pound blocks of processed American cheese. The cheese is part of a surplus from federal price-support programs for dairy products.

Cliett says she doesn't expect longer-than-usual lines this year due to the reduced number of sites.

Those applying for cheese must provide their Social Security number and sign an income-verification voucher, Cliett says. If eligible, they will be given some cheese on the spot.

The agency uses federal poverty guidelines to determine eligibility. This year, Cliett says, the separate guideline for farm families has been eliminated.

The income requirements are: for a one-person household, the annual income should not exceed $6,075; for a family of two, $8,175; $10,275 for three; $12,375 for four; $14,475 for five; $16,575 for six; $18,675 for seven; and $20,775 for eight. For families with more than eight members, add $2,100 for each additional member.

In Twin Falls County, applications will be taken Wednesday and Thursday at the National Guard Armory, off Frontier Road in Twin Falls, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and at the Buhl Senior Center, at 1010 Main, on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Thursday from 10 a.m. until the supply is depleted.

In Jerome County, applications will be accepted at the Jerome Community Action office, at 226 N. Lincoln, on Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; at the Silver and Gold Senior Center, at 203 Wilson Ave. W. in Eden, on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m.; and at Syrina Estates recreation hall, off Fifth Street in Hazelton, on Wednesday from 1 to 3 p.m. and on Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In Gooding County, applications will be taken on Wednesday at the Gooding Senior Citizen center, at 308 Senior Ave. from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; at the Wendell Senior Citizen Center, at 105 W. Ave. A, on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.; and at the Hagerman Valley Senior Center, on Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. and on Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In Lincoln County, persons may apply at the Golden Years Senior Center in Shoshone on Wednesday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. and at the Richfield Senior Center on Monday, May 16, from 1 to 3 p.m.

In Blaine County, applications will be taken at the Blaine County Senior Center in Hailey on Wednesday from 1 to 5 p.m.

In Cassia and Minidoka counties, applications will be taken at the Burley fire station, in the rear of the building, on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and at the Rupert Civic Auditorium, located behind City Hall, on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In Camas County, applications will be taken today and possibly Wednesday at the Camas County Senior Citizens Center in Fairfield. Persons should call Edna Gill at 764-2226.

Persons are encouraged to apply at the nearest location.

TWIN FALLS — Without volunteers, there probably wouldn't be a distribution of free cheese this week.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture provides the South Central Community Action Agency with the surplus food. However, the federal agency provides no funds to distribute the cheese to low-income families.

For the past three distributions, the agency had to hussle for funds to pay expenses. The costs include telephone expenses, printing forms, transportation and staff time.

The agency did receive a $1,000 grant this year from the state Economic Opportunity Office to help. The office administers the federal community service block grants used by the agency.

But even with this money, the SCCAA is relying on volunteers and donations to carry out the distribution, says Carrol Cliett, the agency's services coordinator.

This week, five or more volunteers will be on hand at each distribution site, Cliett says. The volunteers load and unload the cheese, direct clients and take applications for the cheese.

For the first time this year, volunteers also are supervising some distribution sites.

Volunteer coordinators contracted with the agency and took over liability for the cheese, Cliett says. The volunteers also organized their own staff at the sites, all at a savings to the agency. There will be some SCCAA staff members at the sites, but not as many as last year.

Among those donating their time will be the staff and members of many of the senior-citizen centers in the Magic Valley, she says. Also, the Mini-Cassia Ministerial Association will coordinate activities this year in Burley and Rupert.

Another group of helpers are parents of Head Start children. Head Start is a SCCAA program. At the centers, children from low-income families get an early start on school through educational activities.

There also are those people who give their time but belong to no special group, Cliett says. "We just have people who continually volunteer."

The volunteers are capable and responsible, she adds.

While they are paid only mileage, the volunteers are worth their weight in gold to the agency. There is no way the SCCAA staff could handle the distribution without the volunteers, Cliett says.

"It's really important that these people know they are appreciated because they certainly are."

Water closes road, nears homes

GOODING — The Big Wood River was being monitored north of Gooding on an hourly basis Monday night, after one county road flooded during the weekend and unusually high water threatened about 15 homes.

Bill Bunn, the Gooding police chief and the Gooding County civil-defense director, said late Monday night that cooler temperatures have helped the situation.

However, he said one road, running east and west, and adjacent to the river north of town, was closed during the weekend when water covered the pavement in three locations.

"Two of these have dried up. The road is still closed, but the condition is much better now," he said. "We are hoping for a few more days and nights of cool weather to slow the run-off down."

In addition to spring run-off from melting snow, he said the rise in the river was due to the release of water from Magic Reservoir.

One resident, Phomia Silman, an elderly woman who lives alone, was evacuated from her home during the weekend after water surrounded her farm northeast of Gooding, Bunn said. However, the water had not gotten into the buildings as of Monday night.

Several other farmhouses had water in their driveways and yards, but no damage had been reported, he said.

Blaine County officials reported no flooding as of Monday night, but they said the river and other streams are being watched.

Search is on for Jerome murder suspect

JEROME — The search continued Monday for a suspect in the fatal shooting Saturday of a young Jerome woman.

But Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said efforts by his department and other law-enforcement agencies have failed to bring them any closer to the suspect than they were Saturday, when the woman's body was found just west of the north end of the Hansen Bridge, in eastern Jerome County.

Little is known about the suspect or the victim, Cynthia Griffitt, 24, formerly of Utah, he said. The woman had been living in Jerome for only a short time.

Officers are looking for a man who is believed to have driven a light blue pickup truck from the murder scene about 12:30 to 1 p.m. Saturday.

"There is a great need now" for the services the army offers, he says.

"People know that we'll look at their case, and if their needs have merit, we'll help."

Some are sent to other churches or governmental agencies that can offer the necessary services. In other cases, the Salvation Army helps represent people seeking assistance from the county commissioners for bus fare or welfare services.

In addition, if a judge sentences someone to a certain number of hours of community service, often it is the Salvation Army that makes the arrangements as to where the person will serve, such as in an area nursing home.

Since the first of this year, Grehoiver says, the army has assisted more than 1,200 people in the Magic Valley in one way or another.

But the army survives on a shoestring budget. It's work is financed from its Christmas kettles, the United Way and direct donations of money and labor.

The thrift stores, one of the most visable of the army's efforts to aid the needy, operate on a break-even budget, Grehoiver encourages people to donate to the stores, although he notes that such donated items should be usable, because no efforts are made to repair items.

And he encourages people of all economic classes to shop there. "I may have a couple $200 suits for $25, that frankly, the people I'm trying to serve don't have a need for. But a professional man might, and when he buys one of those suits, indirectly, he is helping me serve someone else with the money we earn (from the sale)."

Grehoiver often works 70 hours a week in his ministry. His wife, Linda, who also is an officer in the corps, may work almost as many hours.

But, he says, "It's a joy to put in those 70 hours. I'm thrilled (with the work). There is so much to do."

And it is the successes of his work that keep him going.

"I remember one time we had this hitchhiking couple. They had a baby that was only a week old. It still had its umbilical cord attached. They had no job and no ideas where they were going. But I got them a job on a farm and a place to stay.

"That's what success is, when we make people independent. God is the only one people should be dependent on."

To celebrate national Salvation Army Week, the organization held its annual awards and recognition dinner Monday night at the College of Southern Idaho.

For more information about the Salvation Army and a detailed list of the scores of services that it provides, call the Twin Falls headquarters at 733-8720.

some new members from former Critter Club members, he says.

An eight-week-old establishment, the Jerome Health and Fitness Center, has seen a chance for new business. If a member is willing to join the Jerome club for one year, the business will honor the unexpired portion of a Critter Club membership to a limit of two years, says John Montegna, a part owner of the business.

But the sudden disappearance of The Critter Club probably has kept new members out of their exercise rooms, says Dan Travaille, the manager and co-owner of the Athletic Club of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls. "It makes people wonder a little bit about the stability of the fitness industry," he says.

DeWitt agrees. "You've had two facilities already here in Twin. Sophisticated Lady and now this. Both of them have memberships and then just suddenly close the doors and pull out.

"It makes people leery of joining them, and I don't blame them. But it does hurt the businesses that are here to stay," says DeWitt, whose gym started 15 years ago in the shop where he manufactures his own line of equipment.

Travaille has had experience bringing back confidence to his club. He took over a racquetball business, called Ballbusters, three years ago and shaped it into the current athletic club.

"We had a situation with a club with a negative image, and we had to overcome that," he says. "That took us at least a year."

Since its opening, club membership has swelled to between 750 and 800 members, he says.

Montegna, whose Jerome club has grown to 141 members in six weeks, says investment is one way to convince consumers that they can count on a stable club.

Business people who own their land or buildings are not likely to duck out of sight quickly, he says.

DeWitt also advises persons to avoid long-term contracts and watch for the availability of short-term memberships. Most clubs will offer monthly memberships, as well as yearly, he says. That way, customers can join and leave in a short time and limit their own spending.

Paradox

The thing that people appreciate about most organizations that provide service is their ability to literally explode into action when an emergency arises. However, the paradox of Funeral Service is that emergencies must be met with calmness and deliberation. A funeral director must meet the unexpected with unruffled assurance, as though limitations of time did not exist. The ability to perform calmly and efficiently under pressure is our Hallmark of Funeral Service.

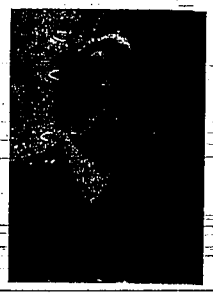
Bid to chop sales tax fails



GORDON HOLLIFIELD
Introduced bill

BOISE (UPI) — A Jerome Republican picked up some support Monday for his surprise move to repeal the recently enacted half-cent Idaho sales-tax increase, but the House ended its one-day special session before the proposal could come to a final vote.

Rep. Gordon Hollifield said he wanted to rescind the estimated $27 million increase passed on the last day of the Legislature's regular session April 14 because state income projections have been upgraded since then.

He said the money to be collected under the half-cent boost, which is scheduled to take force June 1, is not needed as badly as legislators thought when they passed it.

The Idaho Tax Commission and Gov. John Evans have estimated in the past few days that the state will collect up to $19 million more in general-fund revenue than was projected when the 95-day regular session adjourned.

Hollifield succeeded in getting the bill introduced by the House Ways and Means Committee and printed by the House Printing Committee, but only after Republican State Attorney General Jim Jones gave his qualified blessing to the propriety of introducing the bill during the special session.

While the House rapidly passed several other measures in its rush to adjournment, it skipped past Hollifield's bill, thereby killing it and saving the half-cent sales-tax hike.

Lower-chamber lawmakers suspended rules and passed on a 70-0 vote a bill to clear up technical flaws in a law cracking down on drunken drivers.

PUC takes on phone rates

BOISE (UPI) — Mountain Bell executives and Idaho Public Utilities Commission staff members will square off beginning today to debate how much of the telephone company's $34 million rate hike request should be granted.

PUC spokeswoman Dana Howard said Monday the hearing is expected to last through Friday as Mountain Bell officials cross-examine PUC staff members and offer rebuttal testimony in support of the rate increase.

At stake, Ms. Howard said, is whether the phone company will receive the bulk of its increased revenue from basic residential and business rates or from charges for long-distance calls and more sophisticated services.

The PUC staff recommended last month that the phone company receive only about one-third of the revenue contained in the overall rate increase proposal.

Staff members firmly oppose Mountain Bell's request to increase basic residential service rates by 87 to 119 percent, she said.

In testimony prepared last month, the staff said local rates should be increased less than 1 percent. They said the burden of rate hikes should be borne by long-distance callers and those who use specialty services.

Since the PUC granted in April a 4.5 percent interim rate boost for virtually all services, basic residential rates actually could decrease if the staff's residential service option is adopted, she said.

The phone company also has requested increases in basic rates for business customers of between 53 and 73 percent, Ms. Howard said.

If the state commission granted all of the rate hike, Mountain Bell's rates would increase an average of 24 percent, she said.

But the staff has recommended that the three-member commission approve an increase of only 11.6 percent, which would boost annual revenue by $10.2 million, Ms. Howard said.

Idahoans are victims of rackets

BOISE (UPI) — An increasing number of con artists are relying on the trusting nature of Idahoans to make scams in the Gem State a year-round activity, says the director of the Treasure Valley Better Business Bureau.

Ken Thornberg said fraudulent schemes used to occur in Idaho at specific times of the year.

"Up until last year, spring scams would come out around the middle of February or the first of March. Between November 1 and the beginning of spring, scams would be generally non-existent," he said.

But Thornberg said reports of fraud began in January last year, with six separate schemes noted by authorities in one week.

"This year, everything started around Nov. 15. We had more activity during the month of December than in any previous two or three-month period," he said.

Thornberg also said Idahoans make attractive targets for individuals and companies eager to cheat people out of money.

"It's really too bad," he said. "We like to feel you can trust other people. But sometimes that can backfire on you. Idaho is a lot worse than most states, mainly because people are very trusting, friendly and generous."

He said newlyweds, high-school seniors and college students are especially likely to be contacted by people promoting fraudulent schemes.

Racing commission wastes funds

By The Times-News and
United Press International

BOISE — Idaho's Horse Racing Commission cost the state about $45,000 by failing to institute recommendations for improvement of its fiscal procedures and did not handle receipts in accordance with law, the Legislative Auditor's Office said Monday.

Analysts, in a report delivered to the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said the commission's failure to institute management controls recommended by the auditor resulted in the loss of about $45,000 through such problems as misplaced receipts.

"In August, 1982 -- more than one year after discovering the losses -- the commission had still failed to approve internal controls. Controls at the Horse Racing Commission were still inadequate to protect state resources," the report said.

"In the past 10 years, there have been virtually no controls over receipts," office analyst Ken Winkler said.

The commission, in response to the report, said it has now taken steps to tighten fiscal accounting. "We consider this finding to be fully addressed," the panel said.

Commissioners earlier this year fired executive secretary Ted Martin despite protests from the horse racing industry. A new secretary has not yet been named.

The legislative auditor's office also said the commission's controls on the assessment and collection of fines from racing-law violators were "extremely poor."

Budget cuts threaten 'Meals on Wheels'

NAMPA (UPI) — Officials say up to 30 elderly residents in Nampa could lose their "Meals on Wheels" food service unless new sources of funding are found by July 1.

Program coordinator Donna Roe said the program, administered through Mercy Medical Center, has already begun to re-evaluate recipients in case the service cutbacks are ordered at the beginning of the next fiscal year.

And she said officials have set a two-week cutoff period for new recipients in light of the budget pressures.

Selina Anacabe, director of home health for Mercy, said more than 75 people in the Nampa area are currently receiving meals in their homes.

But she said grants from the federal government and the Western Idaho Council on Aging include only enough funds to provide service to about 50 people on a regular basis.

For several years, she said, the hospital has subsidized the program so another 25 or 30 people could be helped. After July 1, those additional funds will not be available, Ms. Anacabe said.

Officials added many recipients have heard of the planned cutbacks, and are fearful they may be included in the list of those who will lose service. One man said he may have to put his wife in a nursing home because he cannot make meals for her every day, Ms. Anacabe said.

She said it costs about $1.000 a year to provide meals to a recipient.

"If you compare that to $1,500 a month to keep that person in a nursing home, that pretty well sums it up," she said.

"Meals-on-Wheels" officials are urging businesses and churches to sponsor recipients so no one will lose their in-home service.

Nicaragua protests shelling, asks for help in UN session

By LEONARDO LACAYO
United Press International

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Nicaragua will lodge an official protest with neighboring Honduras over a mortar attack by Honduran troops, the state radio said Monday.

La Voz de Nicaragua, the official radio station, charged Honduran troops pounded Sandinista positions with 81mm mortars in an attack Sunday on La Papaya, a border post in Madriz province 125 miles north of Managua.

The attack killed one peasant and wounded another, the radio reported, adding that Nicaragua's Foreign Ministry planned to lodge a protest with Honduras over the incident.

The government has filed several protests with Honduras, charging government troops have shelled Nicaragua to back rightist rebels who are fighting to topple the leftist government.

Managua's Barricada newspaper, the organ of the Sandinista Party, said troops routed insurgents, led by Pedro Ortiz — "Commander Suicide" — who launched an offensive against Nicaragua from Honduras April 30.

Eleven government soldiers and an undetermined number of guerrillas died in fighting when rebels tried to take territory near the border town of Jalapa, about 170 miles north of Managua, Barricada said.

At the United Nations, U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick denied charges the United States was waging an undeclared war against Nicaragua and then strode angrily from the Security Council as Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto responded.

"Needless to say there is no American invasion of Nicaragua," Mrs. Kirkpatrick told a council session called to consider Nicaraguan complaints that Washington backed an invasion by anti-leftist rebels.

"It is a fact that the government of Nicaragua has a problem," she said. "The problem for Nicaragua is Nicaragua. In Nicaragua, Nicaraguans are fighting Nicaraguans."

Outside the chamber, Mrs. Kirkpatrick told reporters that d'Escoto told "a tissue of lies" to the council.

In another development, Nicaraguan army Lt. Danilo Lugo, captured by rebels along the southern front with Costa Rica, told a news conference he was used by rebels for propaganda purposes.

Lugo said he was almost killed by Ernesto Pastora, son of rebel leader Eden Pastora, but that Pastora stopped his son.

"Pastora's son wanted to shoot me but the 'traitor' decided to use me so that I would declare myself against the revolution," Lugo said.

He said he was taken to a rebel camp in Costa Rican territory last week, tied to a tree, given pills and forced to read a declaration against the Sandinista government. He was later released to the Costa Rican Red Cross.

Pastora, former deputy defense minister and charismatic war hero known as Commander Zero in the 1979 Sandinista revolution, broke with the leftist rulers over a year ago and recently launched a southern rebel front.

George Shultz and Donald Regan are greeted by Francois Mitterrand

By BRIGID PHILLIPS
United Press International

PARIS — French President Francois Mitterrand called on the industrialized West Monday to create new international monetary institutions or face "panic or a mass default."

Mitterrand, speaking at a reception at the Elysee palace, told ministers from member states of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development that establishing new monetary bodies was vital to the survival of the West.

"The moment has come to think of a new Bretton Woods," Mitterrand said, referring to the 1944 international convention in New Hampshire that established the world's present monetary institutions. "In the absence of such a proposal, there will be no salvation."

France's socialist president called for the organization of a conference, under the auspices of the International Monetary Fund, to discuss the creation of new institutions.

He told some 50 finance, foreign and trade ministers attending the 24-nation OECD's ministerial meeting that the "reconstruction" of world monetary institutions would be based on "economic growth, stabilized exchanges and Third World development.

"If we do not take heed, the entire world will be at the mercy of a panic or a mass default," Mitterrand warned.

Ministers agreed earlier that the fight against protectionism was critical in solving the Western world's economic difficulties, but disagreed on which countries were to blame.

As in similar talks a year ago, nations generally agreed that protectionist trade practices must be discouraged in favor of a free open market in order to restore growth and economic stability.

"It is vital that we, the industrialized nations, keep our markets open so as to permit the growth in exports," said Treasury Secretary Donald Regan in his opening address to the two-day meeting at the OECD's headquarters.

He called on all nations to stop subsidizing industries.

At an earlier briefing, Regan cited Japan as a major offender along with European nations that offer subsidies to producers of textiles, steel, agricultural products and chemicals.

At the meetings, a prelude to this month's economic summit of seven leading Western nations in Williamsburg, Va., the United States set free trade as a prerequisite for recovery.

The European nations, led by France, backed the view that free trade will come only if the United States alters its economic policy. They have demanded the United States lower interest rates to ease the strength of the dollar and help their trading situation.

Spain's Socialists post solid gains

By BJORN EDLUND
United Press International

MADRID, Spain — Official returns Monday gave the Socialists a solid majority in local and regional elections, re-drawing Spain's political map a generation after the left was defeated in the 1936-39 Civil War.

"We are a government for all Spaniards," said Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez after Sunday's vote solidly endorsed his 5-month-old Socialist administration.

"A heavy responsibility falls on us Socialists at this time in history," Gonzalez said. "But I will not fall for the temptation of making any triumphant statements."

The Socialists swept to victory in 11 of the 13 new autonomous parliaments and took control of 33 of the 52 provincial capitals.

With 95.61 percent of the votes tallied, the Socialists also had won 21,451 townhall seats, the Popular Alliance 16,414 and the Communists 2,452.

Gonzalez indicated that his government, while pleased with the outcome, did not see the result as a mandate to alter its moderate economic policy or its pro-Western line in foreign affairs.

Fraga won 26 percent of the vote, and praised the outcome as a reaffirmation that Spain had developed a two-party system, "with us as the only viable alternative to the Socialists."

The Socialists won 43 percent of the vote and the Communist Party 8 percent — consolidating a total reshaping of the Spanish political landscape in less than eight years after the death in 1975 of dictator Francisco Franco.

Franco banned the two parties after his rightist forces defeated them in the fratricidal war.

Completing the creation of 17 autonomous regions started with the advent of post-Franco democracy, election results showed strong Socialist gains in the town halls of the violence-torn Basque country.

Herri Batasuna, an extremist nationalist party loosely linked to the separatist terror group ETA (Basque Land and Liberty), lost a sizeable chunk of its votes, the returns showed.

At the head of a government with an average age of 42, Gonzalez appointed seven economic experts to key ministries to focus its work on double-digit inflation and ballooning unemployment, at 14 percent the highest in Western Europe.

Fisherman survives in air pocket

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — Police divers rescued a diabetic fisherman Monday from a tangle of nets beneath his capsized boat, where he had survived for two days wedged in a tiny air pocket rank with diesel fumes.

Another seaman, the captain of the stricken 30-foot trawler Jan, clung to the upturned hull for 33 hours before he was plucked from the Tasman Sea by a helicopter Sunday, authorities said.

Fisherman John Hutley, 53, said he thought Capt. Reg Stevens drowned Saturday, when a freak 50-foot wave capsized their trawler and threw Stevens overboard off New Zealand's South Island.

Stevens hung on in 25-knot winds and 13-foot seas until a small plane chartered by his fiancee spotted the vessel and called for a chopper rescue.

Hutley, however, remained trapped inside the boat in an air pocket about 20 inches high between the water level and the inside of the overturned hull.

"The air was foul with a fine diesel mist and fumes. Hutley had grabbed a sleeping bag and had wedged himself onto a shelf," said police Sgt. Wayne Wilkey, leader of the police divers who rescued Hutley.

"'I can survive ... I will make it,' Hutley kept telling us," Wilkie said.

The boat capsized about 6 a.m. Saturday about four miles off Westport on South Island and had drifted about 30 miles out to sea before a salvage boat carrying the divers arrived, authorities said.

"I thought, 'They are going to rescue me soon.' So I just stayed there and got colder and colder," said Hutley, surrounded by his wife and seven children after his 45-hour ordeal.

A diver attempted to free Hutley Sunday but was thwarted by a tangled mess of fishing nets and ropes and radioed for help.

"I kept hearing noises — somebody tapping and talking to me. I thought they were the rescuers. I yelled at them. I wanted to know when they were going to get me out," Hutley said.

He said he spent the two days thinking about his feelings for his wife and family and thinking about God.

"But He never came. Satan didn't either. It was just me and my mind," Hutley said.

Argentina may test nuclear bomb

LONDON (UPI) — The United States fears Argentina may explode a nuclear device before October as a "warning shot" for the British to resume negotiations over the Falkland Islands, the Times of London said Monday.

"American officials, diplomats and independent analysts are almost unanimous in their belief that Argentina has the technological ability to produce such a device," the newspaper said in a report from Washington.

In Buenos Aires, Argentina's Atomic Energy Commission President Carlos Castro Madero denied the report, saying it was part of an attempt by Britain to have nuclear suppliers deny Argentina access to technology needed for its nuclear program.

"Argentina does not have any non-peaceful nuclear program underway," Castro Madero said. "On the contrary, all of the activities of this type are aimed at improving the well-being and health of the nation's inhabitants."

The Times report said some experts believe the explosion could take place before the October elections in Argentina. Others say the country's lack of plutonium may delay the detonation a year or two.

Larry Burns, director of the Washington-based Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a liberal group that monitors politics and human rights in Latin America, told the Times the junta is pressing for a nuclear explosion before October.

"They want to do this for political reasons before they hand over to the civilians," he said.

An explosion would not only help to restore the prestige of the military after their disastrous performance during the Falklands war, but would, he added, serve as a "warning shot" to the British to resume negotiations over the disputed South Atlantic islands. Britain defeated Argentina in a 74-day war last year.

Guard removed from Walesa's apartment

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Police lifted their round-the-clock surveillance of Lech Walesa's home Monday and released nine of his Solidarity associates from detention, but the former union leader said he feared further harrassment.

"I expect a new assault on me after this (trade union) meeting," Walesa told UPI at his apartment after finishing his shift at the Lenin shipyard.

He said he thought the police harrassment "was an attack to prevent me from spreading the news of the meeting Friday. I think their reaction will be that we are falling stars trying to stir up trouble."

China seeks jet's return

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — A South Korean official ruled out the possibility of concessions Monday in negotiations with China over the return of a hijacked airliner and 95 passengers and crew to Shanghai.

The two nations met past midnight in efforts to resolve a deadlock that sources close to the talks said centered on China's refusal to specifically mention the South Korean government in an agreement to repatriate the plane.

"Do in Rome as the Romans do," said Foreign Ministry official, Lee Chang-choon, ruling out the possibility of any South Korean concessions in the wrangling over the first Chinese airliner ever hijacked out of the country.

China diplomatically recognizes communist North Korea, which it backed in the 1950-53 Korean war, but Peking has no mission in Seoul.

"The Chinese seem to need time to consult with their government in Peking," a member of the South Korean delegation said.

China backed off a hardline stance and agreed Sunday to let South Korea try the six hijackers who commandeered the British-built Trident jetliner on a domestic flight last Thursday in a bid to defect to Taiwan.

Fraud charge filed over faked diaries

By PHILIP WILLIAMS
United Press International

BONN, West Germany — Stern magazine, publisher of the forged Hitler diaries for which it paid $4.1 million, filed fraud charges Monday against the reporter who claimed he found the documents.

A rival West German magazine accused the same Stern reporter of writing Nazi war criminal Klaus Barbie, offering him a special Nazi "blood flag" for safekeeping and wishing him well.

Stern's publisher Henri Nannen requested that the state prosecutor in Hamburg initiate fraud proceedings against reporter Gerd Heidemann, 51, the magazine said.

Stern said when Heidemann was pressed to identify the person who gave him the diaries purporting to be the journals of Adolf Hitler, he named a man who "most probably does not exist." But there was no suggestion Heidemann forged the documents himself.

"He apparently fell into the clutches of a swindler and then probably enriched himself," the Stern statement said.

Heidemann, who claimed to have found the diaries after a hunt that took him to East Germany, Switzerland and Latin America, was called to Stern's Hamburg headquarters Saturday and asked by the magazine's directors to disclose the name of the man who gave him the diaries.

Before West German government experts declared the diaries forgeries Friday, Heidemann had refused to identify the source on the grounds it might endanger the man's life. The government said the paper and ink used in the diaries had not been manufactured until after Hitler's death in 1945.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, making his first public statement on the scandal, said: "It would be of interest to find out how these diaries came about."

Answering questions at a regular news conference, Kohl said he would not rule out any motive for the forgeries.

"You can combine political and financial motives very well," he said.

Stern's competitor, the picture magazine Bunte, said Heidemann wrote a friendly letter to Klaus Barbie, the so-called "Butcher of Lyon," offering to send him a Nazi flag for safekeeping.

The swastika banner, known as the "blood flag," was a relic of the 1923 Munich putsch in which Adolf Hitler made an abortive attempt to overthrow the Weimar government, Bunte said.

The magazine said it would publish a facsimile of the letter, dated Aug. 22, 1982 and sent to Barbie before the wartime head of the Gestapo in Lyon was expelled from Bolivia to France to stand trial for war crimes.

Bunte said that in the letter, Heidemann told Barbie he had succeeded in safeguarding several Nazi relics, including some Hitler watercolors and drawings, a plaque listing the Nazi dead of the 1923 putsch, the pistol used by Hitler to kill himself in Berlin in 1945 and, "above all, the blood flag."

"In my opinion, at least this relic of the National Socialist movement must be preserved in a safe place by reliable men," Bunte quoted Heidemann.

Bunte said the letter was typed and signed by Heidemann.

Salvadoran guerrillas kill 20 soldiers

By MICHAEL W. DRUDGE
United Press International

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador -- Rebels claimed Monday that guerrilla forces killed at least 20 soldiers in a daylong battle to capture the strategic northeastern town of Cinquera.

A military spokesman said the rebels harassed army reinforcements heading for the town about 20 miles northwest of San Salvador by planting anti-personnel mines along the roads.

A rebel broadcast also said the guerrillas, in the fighting in Cinquera and a second ambush, captured a total of 74 rifles "sent by (President) Reagan," a reference to U.S.-supplied M-16s that are the standard-issue government rifle.

Radio Venceremos said guerrilla forces "annihilated" government troops in and around Cinquera in attacks Sunday on two military posts, killing and wounding at least 60.

A military source in Sensuntepeque, 20 miles east of the embattled town of Cinquera, confirmed 20 soldiers were killed and an undisclosed number were wounded in the rebel assaults.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said about 50 soldiers were posted on the outskirts of Cinquera, located just 5 miles from the key Cerron Grande dam that generates more than half of San Salvador's electricity.

Military sources in the northern Cabanas province where Cinquera is located said 13 troop transport trucks carrying about 800 men were rushed to the town of Tejutepeque, about three miles southeast of Cinquera.

But an officer said the reinforcement column was slowed because guerrillas lined the two roads to the town with Claymore anti-personnel mines that are usually set off from a distance.

One officer said it appeared about 600 guerrillas, most of them from the Popular Liberation Forces, were camped in and around Cinquera, a town nestled in a valley surrounded by mountainous terrain.

During Sunday's battle at least one government warplane and two helicopters ran daylong bombing and strafing missions but failed to clear a way for evacuation of wounded soldiers, one officer said.

Venceremos said that besides the rifles, rebels seized two mortars and five field radios in addition to "large quantities" of munitions. The broadcast said rebels also ambushed a relief column traveling north of Tejutepeque, an attack that netted them 14 of the 74 captured M-16 rifles.

Meanwhile, judicial sources reported 11 bodies were dumped the past 24 hours on a road north of San Salvador traditionally used by rightist "death squads" to dispose of their victims.

Syrians work against withdrawal agreement

By United Press International

Syrian President Hafez Assad returned home Monday after talks with Saudi King Fahd in which they agreed to "counter the dangers" posed by Israel's troop withdrawal accord with Lebanon, state-run Damascus radio said.

Saudi Arabia earlier expressed support for the U.S.-mediated Israeli agreement to withdraw its forces from Lebanon, and there was no immediate Saudi comment on the Assad-Fadh talks in Jeddah.

But Damascus radio said, "The talks between President Hafez Assad and King Fahd concorded on the need to counter the dangers provided by the Israeli imposed agreement with Lebanon."

"Both sides decided to work independently and jointly to confront those dangers should the Lebanese-Israeli plan become a full-pledged agreement."

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam warned as Assad prepared to fly back to Damascus that the Soviet Union will support Syria against any Israeli aggression, state-run Beirut television said.

Syria denounced the Lebanese-Israeli accord to withdraw Israeli troops from the country — negotiated by Secretary of State George Shultz — saying it gave Israel military and economic gains and infringed on Lebanon's sovereignty.

Israel has said it will not withdraw its 30,000 troops from Lebanon unless Syria takes out its 40,000-man force.

In Paris, U.S. officials traveling with Shultz said that the negotiations on an Israeli withdrawal almost broke down last week, but fear of the risks of failure brought both the Israelis and the Lebanese to an agreement in the last minute.

In Lebanon, rival militias firing rockets and artillery battled in the mountains outside Beirut for the fifth straight day as strikes and fear of renewed shelling kept most residents indoors.

The exchanges between Christian and Moslem Druze militias near Aley, 10 miles southeast of Beirut, was "indiscriminate," police said. The fighting erupted around noon and continued through the day.

There were no immediate casualty figures for the latest fighting. The Beirut newspaper As Safir said 32 people died and more than 100 were wounded since the fighting began Thursday.

Andropov assumes new job

MOSCOW (UPI) — Pravda disclosed Monday that Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov has been named commander-in-chief of the Soviet military, a sign that he has consolidated his grip on power and may soon become the nation's president.

The revelation came toward the end of a lengthy article in the Communist Party newspaper by Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov to mark the 38th anniversary of V-E day, a major holiday in the Soviet Union.

Referring to the 68-year-old leader for the first time as chairman of the U.S.S.R. Defense Council, as well as by his title of general secretary of the Communist Party, Ustinov said Andropov devoted "constant attention" to the defense needs of the country.

"Yuri Vladimirovich (Andropov) enjoys great respect and authority among the fighters of the army and navy," Ustinov said, recalling Andropov's wartime career with partisan forces.

The report came after months of speculation of a struggle in the Politburo between Andropov supporters, including the military and foreign policy establishments, and party functionaries represented by Konstantin Chernenko, a long-time aide to late leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Chernenko, 71, failed in the contest with Andropov to take over as general secretary of the party after Brezhnev's death in November, but the other positions — defense chief and president — remained unfilled.

He has not been seen in public since March 30, although his portrait was displayed on May Day and his signature appeared under official obituaries since then. Official Soviet sources said he has the flu.

Fireworks explode, 20 dead

SANTA CRUZ TLAPACOYA, Mexico (UPI) — A town festival, complete with fireworks and ferris wheel, turned into a nightmare when aerial rockets exploded, demolishing a church and killing at least 20 people, officials said Monday.

"Yesterday the town was all joy and today we are dressed in mourning," said Pablo Hernandez Flores, 43, who was in his home in front of the church when some 35 pounds of aerial bombs exploded late Sunday night.

"There were people trapped at the top of the ferris wheel," he said. "They were screaming and they were going to jump, but we stopped them."

At least 130 people were injured in the town of some 12,000 residents, 15 miles east of Mexico City, celebrating the feast of the Holy Cross, an annual festival that draws Catholic revelers from nearby towns and features carnival rides and traditional fireworks displays.

A spark from one of the displays, a bamboo bull with flares shooting from its horns carried by a townsman, was the cause of the blast, Flores said.

He said the flare flew through an open window into the back room of the church where the aerial rockets and extra gunpowder were stored.

"The walls of the church were blown out and that is what smashed into the people," said Flores.

Earth tremors scare residents of Coalinga

By WILLIAM P. COLEMAN
United Press International

COALINGA, Calif. — Seemingly cheerful residents who asked "What's new?" as the earth shook sporadically Monday were frightened anew by the aftershocks of last week's devastating quake that nearly demolished the city.

"We're getting used to it now," said Leslie Samuels, 28, who was eating Mother's Day dinner with 2,500 other evacuees in the huge National Guard mess tent when two heavy shocks registering around 5 on the Richter Scale rocked the Coalinga area Sunday night.

No injuries were suffered in the strong aftershocks and the only new damage was additional crumbling of buildings already wrecked.

"We were eating in the tent and didn't even get up from the table," Ms. Samuels said. "A lot of people were talking about it, but not many left the tent."

Up until the Sunday evening aftershocks, city spokesman Bob Semple said "It has almost been a jovial atmosphere."

"Everyone's been kind of upbeat," he said. "So this puts them on guard again."

Andy Lopez and his sons, Andy Jr., 16, and Tony, 15, were stacking bricks from the rubble of the earlier quake when the new rumbles struck and tumbled the rebuilt chimney.

"It wasn't as big but it scared the hell out of me anyway," Lopez said.

School officials, who hoped to reopen elementary schools today, said frightened youngsters could bring their parents to class with them.

The high school and junior high suffered heavier damage and "we don't know when they'll reopen," school superintendent Robert Vert said.

At a disaster center three dozen people sat at a ring of desks Monday, filling out forms to get assistance in repairing their damaged homes. About 75 more waited in line to complete the forms that were stacked to the ceiling.

One of them, Pam Blake, 23, clutched her 6-week-old daughter, Tristan, as she compared Sunday night's scare to the original 6.5 quake last Monday.

"I grabbed the baby and ran outside with my mom," Mrs. Blake said. "It's the same thing I did last week. It didn't last as long this time, but it felt as big to me and it scared me as badly."

Amtrak lawsuit fizzles

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — A federal judge Monday dismissed the state of Wyoming's suit designed to force Amtrak to continue rail passenger service in Wyoming.

The state had sued U.S. Attorney General William French Smith, who under the National Passenger Rail Service Act is the only agent who could bring suit against Amtrak.

Smith refused to bring suit against Amtrak, and U.S. District Judge Ewing T. Kerr Monday agreed Smith was acting within his discretionary power.

"The decision made by Smith not to sue Amtrak in this case was discretionary in nature," Kerr said, "there is no requirement that suit be brought and, therefore, the action is not proper for ... relief."

Amtrak wants to reroute its east-west San Francisco Zephyr, which currently crosses southern Wyoming in its leg between Denver and Salt Lake City, through central Colorado in an attempt to increase ridership.

The state of Wyoming maintained Amtrak did not give proper notice of the route change or solicit public comment.

The state claimed ending passenger rail service in Wyoming would be a burden to the citizens of Wyoming living in the cities served by Amtrak — Cheyenne, Laramie, Rawlins, Rock Springs, Green River and Evanston.

The state said residents used Amtrak to travel to Salt Lake City and Denver for medical care, and some state businesses, such as florists, used Amtrak for business deliveries.

In a brief filed by Assistant U.S. Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, the federal government maintained Amtrak does not need to give notice for public comment when it is rerouting over existing routes that do no affect a major population center.

Amtrak also said that the proposed new route through the Colorado Rocky Mountains on track owned by the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, was the initial route chosen for the San Francisco Zephyr when Amtrak was formed in 1971, but the route was moved to southern Wyoming when Amtrak could not reach an agreement with D&RG.

Close encounter with comet tonight

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The best view of a newly discovered comet comes tonight when the glowing mass makes the second closest approach of a comet to Earth in history, astronomers said Monday.

The comet, named Iras-Araki-Alcock for the satellite and two amateur astronomers who discovered it last week, made its closest encounter with Earth at 6 a.m. MDT today, passing within 3.1 million miles of this planet.

The exceptionally fast-moving comet has been visible for several nights, but will best be seen from tonight through dawn Wednesday.

"When the sun sets it will be near the Big Dipper and moving rapidly towards the west of the constellation Leo the lion," astronomer Stephen Edberg said. "You should be able to literally watch it cross the sky."

Edberg, a member of the International Halley Watch, said the comet can be seen with binoculars and may be visible to the naked eye if it is a dark night and city lights are not too bright.

The comet, which will come closer to Earth than any except Lexell in 1770, will look like a fuzzy, glowing ball about the same diameter as the moon.

For astronomers with telescopes, coordinates for the comet at its closest approach Wednesday are right ascension 10 hours, 25 minutes and 2 seconds; declination plus 60 degrees, 47 minutes.

Small Colorado dam breaks, looses torrent

DECKERS, Colo. (UPI) — A small earthen dam broke in the foothills south of the resort area of Deckers, Colo., Monday, unleashing a torrent of water that washed out two private bridges, briefly isolated a campground and closed a highway.

There were no injuries or major damage, officials said.

State Highway 67 was reopened by mid-morning, but the warning signs were posted because there had been some damage to the roadway. The water also had receded in Horse Creek.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Kraus said one of two earthen dams at the Pine Lakes Estates summer home area gave way about 6 a.m. MDT, unleashing the torrent of water into West Creek. The water flowed into Horse Creek, which runs next to the highway.

Horse Creek flows into the South Platte River just north of Deckers.

The rushing water eroded sections of the highway next to the river, but did no major damage. It did tear out two private bridges across the river.

A KOA campground between Deckers and Rainbow Falls was surrounded by water for a time and several trailers had to be pulled from the campground.

'Squeal law' blocked

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A federal judge issued a temporary restraining order Monday blocking a new state law that requires parents to be notified if minors try to purchase contraceptives.

Court Clerk Paul Badger said U.S. District Judge David K. Winder enjoined state officials from enforcing or implementing the 1983 law. The measure, sometimes called the "squeal rule," was scheduled to go into effect today.

Winder waived federal rules on a 10-day time limitation, saying the order will remain in effect until further order of the court. He said a final hearing on the issue will be conducted by Aug. 5.

The law would require parental notification before a minor could receive contraceptives or services from public or private providers. It has brought protests from pharmacists that sell over-the-counter birth control devices.

If the law is upheld, pharmacists would have to ask young purchasers to verify their age and get permission from parents before selling non-prescription contraceptives.

Heavy snow blocks roads

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) -- Heavy wet snow caused school and road closures and knocked out electricity to numerous Montana communities near the Continental Divide Monday.

Several mountain passes received more than one foot of snow, and other passes were closed to all but emergency traffic. More snow was predicted Monday night, and the snow level was forecast to drop to 3,000 feet.

Nurses want union, try new strategy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Nurses at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center are using the so-called corporate accountability strategy in an attempt to get a union at the hospital.

That strategy helped textile workers get a union contract at J.P. Stevens & Co. after years of strikes and boycotts.

The Service Employees International Union Local 535 wants a government-supervised election to prove the majority of nurses at Cedars are in favor of union representation, a move hospital management is fighting.

The hospital gets substantial sums from philanthropic organizations and wealthy individuals, and the union is appealing to them to urge Cedars' management to stop opposing efforts to get an election.

Spurs have to control Kareem

By DAN BARREIRO
Dallas Morning News

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — As the Los Angeles Lakers were high-fiving and deep-sixing the San Antonio Spurs in four straight playoff games last year, Stan Albeck found one thought inescapable.

"I've got to get a center to play Kareem," the Spurs coach said.

So he went out and got an Artis.

Problem solved? So it seemed. With Artis Gilmore, all 7-2 of him, leaning on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, all 7-1 of him, the earth moved for the Spurs. Gilmore played Abdul-Jabbar to a virtual standoff. Not coincidentally, the Spurs won four of five regular-season meetings.

But Gilmore and Abdul-Jabbar have already thrown away that ledger. When they walk into the Forum tonight for Game 2 of the NBA Western Conference championship series, they'll be thinking only of a new one.

It reads: Abdul-Jabbar 1, Gilmore 0.

Not coincidentally, the Lakers lead the best-of-seven series, 1-0. Abdul-Jabbar knows it. Gilmore knows it. And the Spurs know if they are to come back, Gilmore must come back.

As hard as it is to imagine that a 7-2, 260-pound man can be helpless, Gilmore was just that against Abdul-Jabbar in the series opener on Sunday. Check the numbers: Abdul-Jabbar had 30 points, eight rebounds and three shots in 44 minutes. Gilmore had seven points, six rebounds and four blocked shots in 32 minutes, before fouling out. The Lakers won, 119-107. "This," Gilmore said, "is hurting me."

A thoughtful man who speaks almost in a whisper, Gilmore thinks — hopes? — he has the answer. "I'm going to have to put more pressure on him on offense," he said Monday. "You're not going to stop him. But I'm going to have to get more involved in the offense. I'm going to have to make him work harder on defense."

In five regular-season meetings, Gilmore averaged 21.6 points and nine field goals. In Sunday's game, he only took seven shots, making three. "That's not enough," he said.

But shooting more and scoring more may not be so easy.

These two centers are similar in many ways: Both speak softly and show little emotion. Both, Albeck said, "are way past all the ego trips. The only important thing to them is winning."

Their games are different, though. Abdul-Jabbar has a magnificent array of shots — sky hooks and short hooks, jump shots and dunk shots; Gilmore's best shot is the stuff. "I think it may be a little easier to set up a defense against Artis than against Kareem," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley.

Substitute Nichols stars as Red Sox thrash Angels

By United Press International

Nichols, filling in for injured Tony Armas in center field, went 4-for-4 with a homer, two doubles and two RBI and also made two outstanding defensive plays Monday night to help the Red Sox defeat the California Angels, 8-2.

Wade Boggs also drove in two runs for the Red Sox, who have won six of their last seven games and 11 of their last 14.

Bob Stanley pitched 6⅔ innings of two-hit shutout relief to get the victory while Tommy John, 2-2, took the loss. Stanley walked one and struck out three in lowering his ERA to 1.11 and boosting his record to 3-2. He has won or saved seven of the Red Sox' last 10 victories.

"Stanley came in and shut the door on us," said Angels' Manager John McNamara.

"I hadn't pitched in five days so I was ready and I felt good," Stanley said. "With a six-run lead, I just threw strikes and hoped they hit it on the ground at somebody. And they did."

Boston scored all its runs in the first three innings, seven off John. Armas tripled to knock in Dwight Evans in the first and the Red Sox added three more runs in the second on an RBI double by Glenn Hoffman, a sacrifice fly by Jerry Remy and a wild pitch.

John faced only three batters in the third and did not retire any of them. He walked Jim Rice and gave up a single to Armas and a two-run single to Boggs. Dave Goltz then was called in to face Nichols, who slammed a 3-and-2 delivery into the left-field screen for his second homer of the season and second in two days.

"I'm a backup, that's my role. I do what Ralph asks me to do. It's a team sport and what the manager says is right. I don't want to cause any problems," he said.

California opened the scoring in the first on a solo homer by Ellis Valentine, his first, off starter Bruce Hurst.

Mariners 6, Orioles 4

At Baltimore, rookie Jamie Allen slugged his second major-league homer and knocked in three runs in sparking the Mariners to victory.

Allen, whose first major-league homer came in the ninth inning of Sunday's 4-2 victory over Boston, slammed a solo homer to straightaway center field off loser Scott McGregor, 3-2, in the first inning and added a two-out, two-run single in the second as Seattle jumped to a 4-0 lead after two innings.

Jim Beattie, who came off the disabled list on April 27, won his second game against one loss, allowing six hits and four runs over 6⅔ innings. Bill Caudill worked the last 1⅓ innings to notch his sixth save.

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 1

At Chicago, Willie Upshaw and Alfredo Griffin drove in two runs each in a six-run sixth inning to back the three-hit pitching of Luis Leal and lead the Blue Jays to victory. Cliff Johnson homered for the Blue Jays and Carlton Fisk homered for Chicago.

Upshaw had an opposite field two-run single and Griffin followed with a two-run triple as the Blue Jays tagged Britt Burns with the loss in his first start of the season after coming off the disabled list.

Leal, 2-3, struck out six and walked two while pitching his second complete game of the year. He lost his shutout with one out in the eighth inning when Fisk belted his first homer of the season.

The only other White Sox hits were a leadoff single by Rudy Law in the fourth inning and a leadoff single by Harold Baines in the seventh.

Leal and Burns were hooked in a scoreless duel until the sixth when Johnson snapped an 0-for-18 slump by lining a one-out homer. Jesse Barfield and Garth Iorg both reached on errors by shortstop Jerry Dybzinski and a walk to Buck Martinez loaded the bases. Upshaw's single to left scored Barfield and Iorg and knocked out Burns.

Elia in hot seat

By RANDY MINKOFF
UPI sports writer

CHICAGO — Lee Elia remains in the hot seat as Chicago Cubs manager after his tirade against fans earlier this month and speculation continues that he won't finish the season as skipper.

Elia was tabbed by General Manager Dallas Green to serve as first officer on the Cubs' ship. There were those who suggested Elia was nothing more than a mouthpiece for the volatile Green and critics argued Elia's moves were actually those of the general manager.

But Ella's outburst was clear indication that, for the most part, he has a mind and a temper of his own. And not even the rich Philadelphia Phillie blood that binds him to Green is enough to keep his job secure.

"Yes, Lee is a friend of mine but that doesn't mean that if he deserves to be fired, he won't be," Green said last week.

The dilemma facing Green isn't so much whether to fire his good friend. That has happened dozens of times in baseball. The problem facing Green and the Cubs is acquiring a successor who will be as good as, or better than, Ella.

Too often in baseball, managers are fired for whatever reasons and substandard replacements are brought in. You don't fire someone unless you plan to improve on the leadership capabilities in the successor.

In the Cubs' case, there isn't a queue of people waiting to take over a team that has floundered from the start of the season. The pitching is mediocre and the hitting, which figured to be the strong point of the club, has been suspect at best.

"We haven't given Lee much of a chance to manage the way we've played," said one player last week.

It is true that Ella's temper should be curbed. But if managers were fired and hired solely on the basis of outrages, the revolving door for skippers would be spinning so fast it would be hard to keep track of the changes.

Ella should be allowed to prove he can't manage before he is axed. In a little more than one season, Ella hasn't shown he is ready to take this club to the World Series. But he hasn't done a bad job, either, considering the club's mediocre talent.

The Cubs have made enough public relation mistakes since the Tribune Co. took over. They have forced the issue of lights in Wrigley Field too far and too fast, angering the neighborhood and even the Illinois legislature.

They signed Ron Cey to an outlandish contract when they needed pitching and also nearly got caught exposing their top pitcher — Ferguson Jenkins — to the rival Chicago White Sox in the compensation draft.

Patience is what this franchise needs most.

Malone, Moncrief seek better efforts

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The focus for the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference finals won't be on the heroes of Game 1.

Instead, the spotlight should land squarely on Philadelphia's Moses Malone and Milwaukee's Sidney Moncrief Wednesday night when the 76ers will attempt to take a 2-0 advantage over the Bucks in the best-of-seven playoff series.

The 76ers posted a 111-109 overtime win in Sunday's opener despite a subpar performance from Malone, who averaged 31.5 points per game in the team's four-game semifinal sweep of the New York Knicks.

Malone scored 14 points, shot only 5-of-14 from the field and turned the ball over nine times against a sagging defense anchored by the Bucks' three centers — Bob Lanier, Alton Lister and Harvey Catchings.

"There's a lot of contact," Malone said. "They were waiting for me today. You get pushed around in there but that's the name of the game. The best I can do is go out and play my game."

Lanier fouled out with 2:50 left in regulation and argued his first foul call so vehemently that referee Mike Mathis whistled him for a technical.

But Lanier knows he'll have to work just as hard on Wednesday night, if not harder.

"He keeps coming at you, day-in and day-out," Lanier said. "Even though he didn't have a normal Moses Malone day, they still won. We'll continue to have a game plan on Malone but whether we can continue to hold a great player like that down, we'll have to see."

The story for Moncrief was pretty much the same. The leading scorer (23.3-point average) in the Bucks' stunning sweep of the Boston Celtics, Moncrief managed just one field goal and seven points while turning the ball over eight times.

"I guess the last time I did that (one field goal) was in elementary school," said the All-Star guard. "I missed my first couple of shots and it was all downhill from there. I tried to work hard to get the shots but (Clint) Richardson and (Andrew) Toney worked harder."

But to Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, Moncrief could never take a single shot and he would still scare him.

"Sidney contributes in many ways," he said. "He's like a lot of

Minico's McCloy says he hasn't decided who will hurl today against Bruins

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Minico Coach Paul McCloy's surname rhymes with coy, which is what he was when asked who will pitch for the Spartans in today's Fourth District playoff opener against Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram believes his Bruins will be facing left-hander Terence Smith when the 3 p.m. game commences at Harmon Park. Until then, McCloy will keep the Bruins guessing as he allegedly decides whether to open with Smith or John Miller.

But on the other hand . . .

"Johnny Miller pitched well against Idaho Falls," McCloy said, recalling the right-hander's two-hit effort last Tuesday in Minico's 5-1 triumph.

McCloy went on to note that both Smith and Miller own 4-2 records. He also pointed out that though the Bruins have faced Smith twice this season, they haven't seen Miller — implying that Twin Falls' familiarity with Smith might make Miller a better choice.

Meanwhile, Ingram anticipated the prospect of confronting Smith, who dazzled the Bruins with a two-hit, 1-0 victory March 29 before losing to them last Monday, 3-2.

"The hitters have to be selective and make Terence Smith throw strikes," he said. "If they chase the ball in the dirt and let him get ahead of them, they're going to be in trouble. You know people can hit Terence Smith, but once he gets ahead of them, he throws that good slider and the change of pace and the sinker — and he has a good fastball that he mixes in with his offspeed pitches to keep the kids off-balance."

Nobody can accuse Valdez of being mediocre. He's either indomitable, as he was when he no-hit Idaho Falls, or insufferable, as when he walked nine batters and hit two in a 5-1 loss to Blackfoot.

But Ingram confidently observes that since the Blackfoot outing, Valdez has pitched decently twice, against Pocatello and Highland. "He's had a lot better control," Ingram said. "I think he's back in the groove."

Finding a groove, Ingram thinks, is something all teams have been able to achieve this season. In short, anything can happen in this series.

The Bruins own a 17-7 record while Minico is 14-7, but the Twin Falls coach feels records bely the balance that exists among teams in the Gem State Conference — and the entire state.

"I think we're just about all the same," Ingram said. "They (the Spartans) are capable of beating anybody, just like we are."

The series continues Thursday at Minico. If necessary, a third game will be played Saturday at Harmon Park at 1 p.m.

Eagles need to win Ricks series for berth in Region 18 tourney

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's baseball team has an impressive 27-7 record, but it won't mean much unless the Golden Eagles can defeat the Ricks College Vikings three times this week.

CSI and Ricks meet Wednesday at 2 p.m. for a double-header at Frontier Field and twice Thursday in Rexburg. Three victories are needed to secure the West division's Region 18 tournament berth. Should the Eagles and Vikings split the four games, they'll play a single game Saturday in Rexburg to settle matters.

Wednesday's double-header was originally scheduled for today, but the teams agreed to delay it a day in hopes that warmer weather will arrive. As CSI Coach Jim Walker said Monday, "How would you like to play in 42-degree weather?"

At CSI's four-team tournament in Twin Falls last weekend, the Vikings beat Ricks 14-4 in an affair shortened to five innings by the 10-run "slaughter" rule. That decision didn't count in regional standings, however. It also didn't ease Walker's mind.

"I don't think they (the Vikings) have the pitching for a three- or four-game series, but I can't be sure," he said. "Ricks is always an unknown quantity. They're like David and Goliath — they come back at you."

Walker discounted the mismatch CSI and Ricks engaged in last month, pointing out that the Vikings hadn't played a game in 10 days. The eighth-year coach also noted, by comparison, that while the Eagles have had difficulty against Utah Tech this season, Ricks pounded Utah Tech so severely that the 10-run rule had to be exercised.

Hoping to avoid a similar fate, CSI will send Tracy Poulson and Steve Clements, two of its top pitchers, against the Vikings Wednesday. Poulson pitched all five innings in the previous Eagles-Vikings game, giving up five hits and just one earned run. Tony Gonzales and Lars Hovey, the double-header against Treasure Valley Community College, will be used in relief if needed.

Against TVCC, CSI played aggressively, trying to steal bases in every way — double, early and delayed — and employing the hit-and-run. Walker insists the Eagles will keep dishing it out, but warns that they must be prepared to take it.

"We've got to be able to withstand the pressure we put on TVCC yesterday," he said. "We did against Brigham Young, but that's been down ago).

"We seem to get up for better

Expos' Rogers beats Braves

By United Press International

National

Rogers tossed a six-hitter to post his first career victory in Atlanta Stadium and Warren Cromartie tied a club record by going 5-for-5 Monday night in leading the Expos to a 5-3 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Rogers, 5-1, earned his first victory in Atlanta after six straight losses.

The Expos took a 2-0 lead in the second inning against Rick Camp. Al Oliver led off with a single, and after Gary Carter walked, Tim Wallach singled to load the bases. One out later, Bryan Little lofted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Oliver, and Rogers followed with an RBI single to left.

Atlanta got a run back in the fourth when Dale Murphy singled to right, moved to third on a double by Bob Horner and scored on a wild pitch.

Montreal went ahead 3-1 in the fifth when Tim Raines walked, stole second and scored on a single by Cromartie, who has had seven hits in his last seven at-bats to tie another club record.

Giants 5, Cardinals 4

At San Francisco, pinch-hitter Dave Bergman singled home the winning run to cap a two-run ninth inning rally that enabled San Francisco to extend its winning streak to six games. After the Cardinals had scored three runs in the top of the ninth to take a 4-3 lead, the Giants began their comeback against losing reliever Bruce Sutter, 3-1, when Milt May walked. Max Venable went in as a pinch runner and he beat the throw to second on Johnnie Lemaster's sacrifice bunt attempt.

Astros 6, Mets 4

At Houston, Phil Garner's two-out, two-run double highlighted a five-run fifth inning and Frank LaCorte pitched four innings of one-hit relief to boost the Astros. Trailing 4-0, the Astros sent nine batters to the plate in the fifth inning and routed rookie Rick Ownbey.

Dodgers 4, Cubs 3

At Los Angeles, Ken Landreaux, who earlier homered to tie the score, beat out an infield single with two out in the ninth inning to drive in Bill Russell with the winning run, leading the Dodgers. Russell reached on an infield single, was sacrificed to second by pinch hitter Dave Anderson and took third on Steve Sax' infield out.

To statutory rape charge

Red Sox infielder pleads innocent

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Red Sox infielder Julio Valdez pleaded innocent Monday to a statutory rape charge involving a 14-year-old runaway who says she lied to him about her age.

JULIO VALDEZ

The Red Sox Monday night placed Valdez on the restricted list, meaning he cannot work out with the team but will still get paid. General manager Haywood Sullivan made the move after receiving permission from American League President Lee MacPhail, and after consultation with the Players Association and the commissioner's office.

To take Valdez's spot on the roster the Red Sox called up second baseman Marty Barrett from the International League farm team in Pawtucket, R.I. Barrett was with the Red Sox for the first 11 days of the season, and hit .309 at Pawtucket in 19 games with one home run and 11 RBI.

The girl, described by her mother as a "baseball nut," was back at Fenway Park Sunday collecting autographed baseballs of Red Sox players to add to her collection.

She said she didn't want to get Valdez, who is married, in trouble because "he's a nice guy."

"I didn't think it would be all over TV and the papers like it was," she said from her lower box seat. "I didn't want to get him in trouble."

Valdez, 26, was arrested Friday night at Fenway Park and released on $10,000 bail. Red Sox spokesman George Sullivan said Valdez will not play until further notice but has declined to comment on the case.

The girl, now back at her parents' Berkley home, claims she became acquainted with Valdez when he played with the minor league team, the Pawtucket Red Sox.

"I told Julio I was 17 — he didn't know how old I was," the girl said. "If I told him I was 14, I would never be with him."

The girl said she and a friend ran away from home March 28 "so we could do what we wanted."

Police found her outside Fenway Park April 20 and returned her to her parents, who phoned police after she told them she feared she was pregnant, the Boston Herald said Monday.

Boston police investigated for three weeks before making the arrest late in Friday's game on a court warrant issued that evening, police said. He was led from the clubhouse in handcuffs.

Conigliaro has lung part removed

Spokesmen at Massachusetts General Hospital said Conigliaro, who was stricken in January 1982, had the lower lobe of his left lung removed because of recurring respiratory difficulties that began with a bout of pneumonia last fall.

"The operation went well. It lasted for about two hours," said hospital spokesman Martin Bander.

Conigliaro was reported in stable condition in the hospital's intensive care unit following the surgery, which was performed by staff surgeon Dr. Ashbey Moncure.

"The lower portion of the left lung had not been functioning for some time and it was the source of repeated bouts of pneumonia and lung collapse," said Bander.

Conigliaro, 38, suffered a heart attack Jan. 5, 1982 while being driven by his brother Billy to Logan International Airport in Boston after interviewing for a local sportscaster's job.

The attack cut off the flow of blood to his brain and the former ballplayer was left comatose for four days and semi-conscious for seven weeks. He was transferred from Massachusetts General Hospital to Shaughnessy Chronic Disease Rehabilitation Hospital in Salem.

He continued to make progress in regaining control of his body and mind, but he suffered a setback last September when his left lung collapsed. That setback was treated non-surgically.

Conigliaro led the American League in home runs at age 20 and had 100 homers by age 22. He was considered a budding superstars but his career was hampered by a series of accidents.

In 1967 he was hit in the head with a pitched ball and the concussion nearly ended his career. But he came back to play several more years in the major leagues before retiring.

defense, something the Spurs didn't have to contend with in beating Denver, 4-1, in the previous series, kept it from him. And when he did get it, good defense often made him give it up. "I thought what happened was our team defense did a really good job of going after him," Riley said.

Which leads to another problem for the Spurs. "They Lakers did a really good job of helping Kareem defend Artis," said Banks. "But we didn't help Artis against Kareem enough. We have to give him more of a hand."

Traditionally, Gilmore has been relatively successful defending Abdul-Jabbar one-on-one. That was one of the reasons Albeck was so interested in obtaining him. But Abdul-Jabbar, 36, is playing with the hunger and enthusiasm of a rookie. (His 44-minute stint Sunday was the longest by a player for either team.) And it may well be that the Spurs are expecting too much from Gilmore alone.

"It does seem they make Artis take Kareem by himself," said Lakers forward Jamaal Wilkes. "I remember a few times where Kareem would cut across the lane, and there'd be nobody else there to help out."

Often, the result was Abdul-Jabbar getting the ball in excellent position. "When he gets the ball in scoring position," said Riley, "when he gets that leverage and can attaack either way, then it's just a matter of the percentages."

Admitted Gilmore: "Sometimes, a guard would come down and pick me, and by the time I could get there, Kareem was already in position."

Picking up two fouls in the first three minutes didn't help Gilmore, who fouled out with 5:18 to play. During the Lakers' 4-1 series victory over Portland, Riley complained Abdul-Jabbar was being mugged by the Trail Blazers' front line. Well, now Albeck is complaining Gilmore can't touch the Lakers' center without a whistle blowing.

"We were thinking of making Artis come to practice with a pair of handcuffs," said Albeck. "We were thinking of making him guard (teammate) Billy Paultz with them. "They won't let us touch Kareem."

great players in that he doesn't have to score to be valuable."

Nelson found Sunday that a quick lineup of Marques Johnson (30 points), Junior Bridgeman (22), Moncrief and Brian Winters, with Lanier in the middle, could be his most effective one.

"That lineup makes us a little more effective," Johnson said. "If a team takes away the boards like Philly can do, it might hurt us but so far it's been successful. We have good athletes and we can hold our own against bigger teams."

After Julius Erving fouled out in the overtime to join Toney on the bench, Cunningham went to a three-guard lineup — Richardson, Maurice Cheeks and Franklin Edwards — and the trio was effective.

"That's the first time we've used that combination all year," Cunningham said. "Both teams made important adjustments throughout (Sunday's) game and all seemed to work."

After Monday's workout, team officials said Erving did not run in practice because of an inflamed left knee. But Erving is expected to play in Game 2. He aggravated his chronic knee condition in Sunday's victory.

Norwood boots Stallions to win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Scott Norwood set a U.S. Football League record with five field goals and Billy White added a 1-yard touchdown run Monday night to propel the Birmingham Stallions to a 22-7 victory over the New Jersey Generals.

It was the third straight triumph for Birmingham, now 5-5. New Jersey fell to 3-7.

Norwood's five field goals broke the record set earlier this season by Michigan's Novo Bojovic and Tim Mazzetti of Boston.

Using four running backs and the pinpoint passing of Bob Lane, the Stallions managed to control the ball throughout the game and set up Norwood field goals of 39, 28, 31, 37 and 25 yards.

New Jersey's league-leading rusher, Herschel Walker, suffered his worst game of the season, gaining only 28 yards on 11 carries. His previous low was 39 yards against Tampa Bay on March 20 and he had gained over 100 yards in each of his last five games.

New Jersey scored first, with Bobby Scott hitting Tom McConnaughey with a 37-yard TD pass on the Generals' second play from scrimmage. New Jersey had taken over on the Birmingham 36 after Mike Williams' 16-yard return of a 30-yard Alan Bollinger punt.

The Stallions tied the game with 6:35 remaining in the first quarter on White's 1-yard run, capping an 84-yard drive. The drive was aided by a 24-yard pass from Lane to wide receiver Jim Smith and Smith's 9-yard end-around.

Norwood finished time-consuming drives of 50 and 41 yards with second-quarter field goals. His 39-yarder put Birmingham ahead 10-7, with 12:50 left in the half and he added a 28-yarder with 18 seconds left.

Birmingham had the ball for 22:03 of the first half, compared to New Jersey's 7:57 time of possession. The Stallions gained 227 yards on 43 plays in the half while New Jersey managed 99 yards on 16 plays.

Norwood kicked two more of his field goals in the third quarter as New Jersey continued to struggle offensively. He broke the record with 72 seconds remaining in the game, hitting on a 25-yarder following a 91-yard Stallions' drive.

Lane completed 13-of-19 passes for 182 yards. Smith, the former Pittsburgh Steelers receiver, caught five passes for 78 yards. Ken Talton led Stallion rushers with 64 yards on 20 carries. Generals quarterback Scott completed 7-of-16 for 121 yards.

By CAMERON C. SNYDER
The Baltimore Sun

JOHNNY UNITAS
As he looked with the Colts

BALTIMORE — It seems like only yesterday when a spindle-legged, slightly round-shouldered quarterback calmly pointed down the field and directed Raymond Berry to the proper position for a pass completion in a game that crowned professional football king of spectator sports.

It will be 25 years ago come December when the Baltimore Colts beat the New York Giants, 23 to 17, in the National Football League's first sudden-death championship game. It was then that John Constantine Unitas, of the poker face, crew-cut hair, and golden arm captivated the sports world with this step on a rags-to-riches climb to the top.

How time flies.

Unitas turned 50 years old last Friday. The years have treated him kindly, have blessed him with a certain urbanity, and have brought him a long way since the day in 1956 when he joined the Colts as a skinny and insecure backup quarterback, direct from the sandlots of Pittsburgh.

Now Unitas looks like the successful businessman he is. He wears tailored suits, matching ensembles. His hair is now longer and well groomed, but if the outward appearance has change, inwardly he is much the same. He is maybe a little mellower. He is still solicitious with children and a bit more friendly with adults.

He has his faults? Yes, he can be curt to people he doesn't trust, and once he has been lied to, he will have nothing to do with the liar again. He also believes and trusts his friends, a habit that has cost him dearly in business transactions.

He should have been a wealthy 50-year-old. He invested with friends in several enterprises, a motel and restaurant and crab house in the Orlando (Fla.) area, and a string of bowling lanes on the East Coast, and they went down the drain because of his trust. He just recently finished paying off the debts on those ventures.

He now has his restaurant, a fast messenger service, and a manufacturer's representative agency. He makes some television appearances.

He has fathered two families. Five from his first marriage, Janice, 28; John, Jr., 27; Bobby, 25; Christopher 23, and Kenneth, 15.

He and wife Sandy have three children, Joey, 9; Chad, 4, and Paige, 10 months.

Sandy threw a 50th birthday party for John Friday, with 250 people invited. It was a surprise party for a very good reason. If Unitas had known about it, he might not have come.

Sandy had to lean on him to get him to go to Canton, Ohio, for his induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1979.

"He didn't want to go," Sandy said, "but I pointed out that Joey was born too late to know anything about John's football career and that he owed it to Joey to see him get such an honor."

He will be remembered by the spectators of the 1950's and '60's as a giant among pro football players, although he never weighed more than 197 pounds. He looked frailer than that, but he withstood 17 years in the physically debilitating NFL wars.

Unitas as some men are born to wealth, was born to football, but he made his own greatness by determination, which bordered on fanaticism.

What made Unitas special was his toughness, mentally and physically.

This toughness still edges through conversations with some of the Colt starters on that gray 1958 December day in New York's Yankee Stadium.

Jim Parker, like Unitas a Hall of Famer, remembers how he gained total respect for Unitas. It wasn't for his play selection, his touchdown passes, or his leadership qualities. It was his toughness.

"It happened against the Bears in Chicago," recalled Parker, who was the Colts' left tackle. "My man (Doug Atkins) got through and smashed Unitas across the nose. Blood squirted out all over the place and Alex Sandusky scooped up some mud and stuffed it up John's nose to stop the bleeding.

"When I came into the huddle, I almost became sick at how Unitas looked and if I had been him I would have kicked my butt. But all he said to me was, 'Don't worry about it, baby. Get him next time.'"

Center Buzz Nutter recalls: "When we came back to the huddle, the referee stuck his head in and said, 'Take all the time you need, Unitas.' " perhaps feeling somewhat guilty about the play.

"You know what John said to the official?, 'Get the hell out of here so I can call the play.'

"Jurgensen might have had a better arm," continued Nutter, "but none of the great quarterbacks and I have seen them all, except Sammy Baugh, were as tough and none had the instincts and leadership of Unitas."

Incidentally — all of Unitas's victories were incidental as far as he was concerned — two plays after his beating which included a broken nose, a deep cut on the bridge and a scraped forehead, Unitas tossed a 35-yard touchdown pass to Lenny Moore for a 24-20 victory with just 17 seconds left to play.

No one on the Colts questioned his play-calling, not even Coach Weeb Ewbank during the glory years of 1958 and 1959.

"I grumbled to myself sometimes when I thought he made a stupid call," Parker said, "but I couldn't do that often when he was over 90 percent right with his calls."

Did you ever tell him the play was no good? "Never. He was the boss," Parker said.

Jim Mutscheller, the end who caught a short pass on the next-to-last play to set up Alan Ameche's one-yard plunge to give the Colts the 23-17 victory in 1958, was asked if he was a little perturbed by what most people considered a dangerous gamble with just a short field goal needed for the victory.

"It never crossed my mind," Mutscheller said. "I didn't think anything about it. My feeling was Unitas was good enough and smart enough to make it work. I knew he would throw it out of bounds if I didn't come open."

Sandusky, also asked the same question, said, "Not really. He was always pulling stuff like that. That is one of the things that made him great. No one knew what he was going to do next, not even his teammates."

Berry said the pass to Mutscheller, "Never occurred to me as being a gamble. John had an instinctive ability to call the right play in the huddle and when I would tell him what I could do or not do, he usually filed it away and then called it at an opportune time."

Unitas frequently asked his teammates what they could do against their opponent. In the sudden death game, one of the important plays was a fullback draw to Ameche, who went for a crucial first down and almost broke it to win the game.

Unitas had seen Little Mo Modzelewski, the Giants' tackle, coming on strong on passing plays. He also had noticed that middle linebacker Sam Huff was taking a very deep drop, which was reported to Unitas by Nutter. He didn't use the draw until it was needed, and it worked like it had been drawn on the blackboard.

"I remember that Raymond (Berry) was always telling Unitas what he could do and explaining how he could do it and John would say to him, 'Raymond, I don't have that much time,' " Sandusky said.

Raymond was a perfectionist who ran precise and sometimes complicated pass routes. When the offense was shutting down the pass rush, Unitas didn't mind waiting for Berry to do his thing, but when the rush was hard, well . . . get open quick or else forget about it.

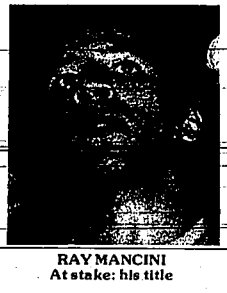
"Unlike Bobby Layne, who would yell and scream at you if your man got loose," said Nutter, who also centered for Layne at Pittsburgh, "Unitas never said a word and I think that made us play better for him because we knew our mistakes were hurting him and he was our bread and butter."



RAY MANCINI
At stake: his title

Mancini must prove he had injury

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — The World Boxing Association ruled Monday that lightweight champion Ray Mancini must present proof of a shoulder injury that forced him to cancel a title bout with Kenny Bogner or face being stripped of his title.

Mancini canceled his fight against Bogner scheduled for May 27 in South Africa.

Elias Cordova, head of the WBA's world championship committee, said Mancini has until May 13 to make an mandatory defense of his title against the division's No. 1 ranked challenger. Cordova said Mancini made his last mandatory defense Nov. 13 in a fight with South Korean Duk-koo Kim, who died shortly after the fight due to injuries received during the fight.

WBA rules stipulate that world champions must defend their titles against leading challengers in their weight divisions. The No. 1 contender is Orlando Romero of Peru.

Cordova said Mancini, who suffered a broken collarbone while training in South Africa, forcing him to cancel his bout with Bogner, "has not deigned to communicate to the WBA what happened to him, so we have no official reports on what occurred."

The WBA official said the champion must prove his lack of fitness with medical reports and any other evidence he might have.

If Mancini establishes the seriousness of his injuries, the WBA will grant him a 6-month grace period before his next obligatory defense, Cordova said.

If Mancini still cannot defend his crown after the grace period, the division's two leading challengers will be matched against each other to fight for the title, he said.

Cordova also said that champions who lose their titles because of injuries are placed as first challengers. He said this information already had been sent to Mancini.

Edmonton, Islanders open NHL finals tonight

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Somewhere beneath the thickening hype, the New York Islanders and Edmonton Oilers were surely doing some sound thinking about today's opening game of the Stanley Cup championship.

It was just so hard to find.

The teams went through final practices Monday for their first meeting at the Northlands Coliseum, each posing a nettle of problems for the other.

The basic starting points were similar: they must stop or at least slow two of the NHL's great players — Mike Bossy of the Islanders and Wayne Gretzky of the Oilers.

That done, there were still enough riddles to last through the best-of-seven series. But the principal order of the day was that questionable pursuit of the so-called psychological edge.

If the Islanders listened to the Oilers for long they would expect to play a squad of farmers with pitchforks in one hand, straw between the lips and overalls for uniforms.

"It's the Big Apple against the poor country boys," said Edmonton Coach Glen Sather, glossing over the fact that Edmonton acquired steamed heat at least 20 years ago, has at least one Vietnamese super market and all the dog sleds are motorized in this city of 500,000.

"We are shooting against the biggest city in North America. The city with the most fans in the richest part of North America and all the tradition. They are the Stanley Cup champions three years in a row and here we are the new kids on the block. We are definitely the underdogs."

The Oilers, should they listen to the Islanders, would get the idea the New Yorkers despise them.

Duane and Brent Sutter, two of the sport's endless collection of Sutter brothers, come from nearby Viking, Alberta (pop. 2,000) and are fed up with hearing Gretzky touted as a hero there.

"Hockey is so big there, it's like religion," Duane Sutter said. "I wouldn't say Gretzky is God there, but he is pretty well-liked. A lot of people from Viking will be at the games. They won't be rooting for us.

"You go home and all you hear about is Gretzky but we had the last laugh the last three years."

The Islanders also profess to be getting a little tired of Edmonton's cocky confidence and hope to silence it with harsh forechecking.

Gretzky has tried to steer away from the build-up as much as possible, being the first off the ice and first out of the dressing room at each practice.

"I don't think there is any great amount of pressure on us," said the 22-year-old center. "They are the defending champions and if they want to do it four times in a row they have to beat us. There may be some butterflies but that is natural. This is our first shot."

The Islanders acknowledge that stopping the NHL's three-time scoring champion does not necessarily guarantee victory since the Oilers also have tremendous firepower in Mark Messier, Jari Kurri, Glen Anderson and defenseman Paul Coffey.

"But you can't treat him like another member of the team, that's the big problem he has always posed," said Islander Butch Goring. "Gretzky makes you wonder how he does the things he does. Mike Bossy is the same. They are the two best scorers in the game today and and are at their best when the teams need it."

The Islanders have a 14-5-4 all-time record against Edmonton, including a 4-2 edge in the last playoff meeting, the Stanley Cup quarterfinals two years ago. This season, New York won all three regular season meetings.

Gretzky has moved within two points of breaking Bossy's Stanley Cup record of 35, set two years ago, but the New York sharpshooter recovered from a slow playoff start with four goals in Saturday's semifinal wrap up against Boston and is again in the running for the MVP award.

O'Brien thinks deals will help both franchises

NBA Cavaliers sold; Indiana club about to be

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — The NBA Board of Governors Monday unanimously approved the sale of the Cleveland Cavaliers to the Gund Brothers and gave tentative approval to the sale of the Indiana Pacers to two Indianapolis real estate developers.

The sale of the Cavaliers, who won only 15 games in the past season, was conditional according to Gordon Gund "in our receiving draft picks in each of the next four seasons to counteract what had been lost in previous negotiations."

Gordon Gund, who is blind and is the owner of the Minnesota North Stars in the NHL, said, "It was very important that the league approve the Cleveland franchise being the recipient of the draft picks to keep the franchise going and to make it a contender."

NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien, who presided over the four-hour special meeting, said he was optimistic the sales could help the struggling franchises.

"These are two franchises which everyone knows have been struggling in recent seasons and the new owners have come forth to take control of the teams because of strong local ties," O'Brien said. "It is apparent our new collective bargaining agreement with the players association approved last April 1 is beginning to provide the stability for which we had hoped."

"No decision has been made to retain coach Tom Nissalke," said Gordon Gund, who lives in Princeton, N.J. "We are currently in negotiations but no decision has been reached."

Harry Weltman, who was named general manager of the Cavaliers last year, said, "The NBA graciously agreed to add an extra draft pick at the June 28 meeting and then in each of the next three years to give us first-round draft picks that would have been lost."

"Before I came along Cleveland management had traded away draft picks from the 1983 through the 1986 season leaving the club in an impossible situation," said Weltman.

Cleveland had traded away its first-round draft picks for Mike Bratz, Jerome Whitehead, Richard Washington and Jeff Huston be ices rights to Bill Robinzine and Chad Kinch.

In the 1983 draft, Cleveland will pick 19th or 20th depending on a coin flip to be made May 19 between Houston and Indiana for the No. 1 college selection and the chance to draft Virginia's Ralph Sampson.

Under the plan devised by NBA owners, Cleveland will be given an additional pick following the first-round selection of 23 players. In the 1984 draft, Cleveland will be given an additional pick but will get its choice by the 12th round. In 1985, Cleveland will pick no worse than eighth.

Vulnerable: Both. Dealer: South. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠	3♥
3♠	4♥	4♠	All pass

Opening lead: Heart deuce

Some declarers in fear of a defensive ruff go to extreme limits to prevent that ruff. Sometimes, "it's from the frying pan into the fire" and declarer discovers that he would have been better off had he allowed the ruff.

East won the first heart and returned a cagey club deuce — he knew his trump honors were badly placed and he wanted to plant the fears of a ruff in South's mind.

The obvious singleton was won in dummy and the trump 10 was pushed through East. East played low smoothly and South made the cowardly play of ace and another trump. East won and shifted to diamonds and the defenders were now in position to win four tricks.

Had South thought more of the hand than just a club ruff, he would have taken the first round finesse in trumps. Had this lost to an honor with West, a club return would have given East his ruff. However, had this all happened, declarer would still have made his game. He would win whatever East led, draw the last trump and his diamond loser would have gone on dummy's fifth club.

Benefits exceed $158 million

BOISE (UPI) — Benefit payments from Idaho Blue Cross and Blue Shield insurance plans on behalf of medical patients in the Gem State totaled $158.6 million last year, company officials say.

The total included $17.1 million paid to physicians and $34.6 million to hospitals, nursing homes and other health care providers on behalf of Blue Cross members, they said.

Blue Cross board chairman Roy Miller of Pocatello said the company paid $70.5 million for Idahoans enrolled in private insurance programs and another $88.1 million under a contract with the federal government's Medicare system.

Dan Duncan, company president, said Blue Cross of Idaho Health Service showed a $1.5 million financial gain in 1982.

Because Blue Cross is a non-profit corporation, the company applied the gain to cash reserves designed to protect Idahoans from future cost increases, Duncan said.

Financial profits set pace

NEW YORK (UPI) — Financial institutions will lead in an overall 30 percent surge in corporate profits in 1983, outstripping the earnings rise in all economic rebounds but one since World War II, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. economists said Monday.

"Although some companies remain to be heard from, the reports so far show a strong reversal of the dismal performance in 1982, when recession-hit profits sagged 15 percent," according to the May issue of the Morgan Guaranty Survey.

Morgan projects a 30 percent gain in pretax "economic profits" in 1983, even if the recovery turns out to be modest compared with earlier upswings.

First trucks start down line

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first trucks produced at Nissan Corp.'s new $660 million plant in Smyrna, Tenn., began moving on the assembly line Monday and are expected to be completed June 16, the president of the facility said.

Marvin Runyon, president of Nissan Motor Manufacturing Corp. USA, said the first 40 trucks that will be sold to U.S. consumers will be assembled gradually over a six weeks period.

Runyon said the deliberate timetable was established "to be sure that all of our systems are in order and that the quality of each job along the way is where it should be."

He said the first truck will roll off the line, completed and ready for shipping, Thursday, June 16. He said Nissan plans to reach a full production capacity of 60 trucks per hour by the middle of 1984.

Offer made for Kaiser plant

FONTANA, Calif. (UPI) — A group led by a Minneapolis businessman offered Monday to buy Kaiser Steel Corp., which recorded net earnings of nearly $2.7 million last year despite a $125 million loss from its steel mill operation.

Under the offer by the group headed by Irwin L. Jacobs, who owns 16.3 percent of Kaiser Steel Corp., the firm's common stock share would be exchanged for $19 in cash, plus one share of a newly created nonconvertible preferred stock.

A company spokeswoman said Kaiser's board will meet Wednesday to consider the proposal, which would involve a merger of a new company formed by the Jacobs group into Kaiser Steel. The transaction requires approval of Kaiser Steel's board of directors and ratification by the holders of a majority of the outstanding common shares.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Robert L. Dryden, president of Boeing Computer Services Co., announced Monday the formation of a major new organization aimed at capitalizing on Boeing's capabilities in the field of integrated information services.

The main thrust of the new organization, Dryden said, will be to bring together three functions: data processing, network services and office automation.

To provide this integrated service, Dryden announced formation of the Information Network Services Group headed by Alvin M. Savio, previously director of strategic planning for Boeing Computer Services.

Hartford acquires brokerage

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Hartford Insurance Co., a subsidiary of ITT Corp., said Monday it will acquire a 25 percent interest in Piper Jaffray, Inc., of Minneapolis, and that the securities brokerage house will market Hartford Life insurance products.

The Hartford Co. said it would not seek control of Piper Jaffray. It will acquire 271,000 shares of the brokerage firm and $95 a share and will make a tender offer at the same price for 38,000 shares. The Hartford Co. will buy enough new shares to provide at least $2 million in new capital for Piper Jaffray.

OPEC production increasing

NEW YORK (UPI) — OPEC oil production has risen by almost 1 million barrels to about 16.2 million barrels a day since February and is expected to increase slightly in the second quarter, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly reported Monday.

The authoritative oil journal said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' oil output dropped to a 14.3 million barrel-a-day low in February.

Rally fizzles, stocks mixed

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — A late rally attempt fizzled and the stock market finished with mixed results Monday.

Many averages fell from record heights in active trading.

Smaller investors bought more than megabuck institutions in the seesaw session that showed Wall Street was torn between a disappointing rise in money supply and reports that banks might lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up three points in the final hour and down eight at the outset, shed 4.36 to 1,228.23. It rose 12.87 to a record 1,232.59 Friday. The Dow had risen 28.26 over the previous four trading days.

The New York Stock Exchange index slipped 0.12 to 95.35 and the price of an average share decreased five cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index shed 0.29 to 165.81. But advances topped declines 860-785 among the 2,006 issues traded.

Big Board volume dropped to 93,670,000 shares, from 128,200,00 Friday, the busiest session in four months.

"The market looks like it has a split personality," Michael Metz, Oppenheimer & Co. vice president, said after prices bounced up and down throughout the day. "It's trying to go two directions at once."

Such a performance "many times reflects the late stages of an upleg in prices." But he cautioned, "the jury is still out on whether big stocks will come back or whether the market will go into a prolonged pullback. There's still a lot of money out there to come in."

"The more time it takes for the correction to develop, the more vulnerable the market becomes to a sharp setback," said Monte Gordon, Dreyfus Corp. vice president.

The Federal Reserve's report late Friday that the nation's money supply rose $1.4 billion in the latest week triggered early selling.

But an accompanying report that bank loans decreased $1.4 billion led many observers to theorize banks might be under pressure to lower their prime lending rate.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 107,929,470 shares, down from the 145,200,890 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 1.75 to a record 444.37 and the price of a share added seven cents. Advances topped declines 320-309 among the 870 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 13,152,530 shares compared with 15,177,295 Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks gained 1.01 to an all-time high 302.65.

Billion dollar years forecast for car firms

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
United Press International

DETROIT — A Wall Street economic forecasting firm Monday predicted each of the Big Three automakers next year will post profits of more than $1 billion.

The projection was made by Bernstein-Research, a division of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. Inc. of New York. It is contained in a lengthy report on industry trends written by analysts David Eisenberg and Gary Glaser.

Should the prediction come true, it would be a "first" for the auto industry.

The report said General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. each will top the $1 billion mark in 1984 with combined profits of $7.1 billion. Chrysler has never posted a $1 billion profit.

This will come on top of estimated 1983 profits of $3.68 billion. Ford and Chrysler this year will come in below the $1 billion mark. The three firms made a combined $470.1 million profit in 1982 although Ford lost money.

The Big Three billion dollar profits coincide with the negotiation of new contracts by GM and Ford with United Auto Workers, whose members last year granted concessions to the automakers.

GM, which made $963 million in 1982, will earn a $2.3 billion profit in 1983, $4.2 billion in 1984 and $5.6 billion in 1985, Bernstein Research predicted.

Ford, which lost $665 million in 1982, will approach the billion dollar profit level with a 1983 profit of $923 million. Ford will make $1.8 billion in 1984 and $2.6 billion in 1985, the firm estimated.

Chrysler should see a $486 million profit in 1983 coming on top of a 1982 profit of $170 million, the firm said. Chrysler will top the billion dollar level for the first time in 1984 with a $1.1 billion profit and post a $1.6 billion profit in 1985.

The prediction of 1984 profits hinges on domestic car sales of 7.4 million units, up from an estimated 6.1 million for 1983. It also supposes that voluntary import restraints on Japanese automakers, which will continue until next spring, will limit the total import share to about 27 percent.

Bernstein Research said Ford, which has not paid a dividend for the last six quarters, should pay a 20 cent dividend in the third and fourth quarters of the year.

GM, which has paid a reduced dividend of 60 cents per share since the second quarter of 1980, will increase that dividend to $1.60 in the final quarter of this year, according to the report.

Chrysler by law is prohibited from paying a dividend until its federally backed loans are paid off. American Motors Corp. does not expect to pay a dividend in the near future.

RUMFORD, Maine (UPI) — Federal health officials plan to begin investigating next week complaints about hazardous work conditions at the Boise Cascade Paper Group mill.

National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health researchers are scheduled to begin a study May 16 of possible health problems caused by industrial chemicals used in papermaking.

It was requested by leaders of United Paperworkers International union representing mill workers. The union has complained that worker exposure to chemicals and gases has caused upper respiratory problems.

"Our basic concern is exposure to chemicals, gases and dust," Aime Fournier, president of Local 900 of United Paperworkers International, said. "The idea is to force the company to take steps to eliminate the problem."

Fournier said the union had asked the management at Boise Cascade to investigate the problem, but the company did not respond.

NIOSH researchers went to the mill in February to conduct a preliminary investigation but were denied access by Boise Cascade officials, who complained the scope of the proposed investigation was too broad.

"They didn't want us going on a witch hunt," Kevin McManus, a NIOSH researcher in Boston, said.

NIOSH has since conducted more interviews with workers and has focused its investigation. The agency plans to look into the possible health hazards from exposure to chlorine, hydrogen sulfide and dimethyl sulfide, which are known to cause upper respiratory problems.

"The union people wrote to NIOSH and NIOSH is coming in," Guimond said. "That's where we are at this point. We're completely cooperating with NIOSH."

Record pace likely for bank failures

By GARY KLOTT
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Bank failures this year will continue at a record pace despite signs of economic recovery, the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation predicted Monday.

William Isaac, whose agency insures customer deposits and has a supervisory role over commercial banks, said the FDIC handled a post-war record of 42 bank failures last year "and we expect the failure rate for 1983 to be at least this high."

So far this year 18 commercial banks have failed.

In a speech to the Society of American Business and Economic Writers' annual convention, Isaac said the number of banks on the FDIC's "problem" list has risen to a record 470.

The list of problem banks whose situations warrant special monitoring by the FDIC is expected to rise through the balance of the year because of the 12-18 month lag between the time economic recovery begins and bank balance sheets start to improve, he said.

But he said the agency has sufficient resources to handle the projected number of failures.

Isaac, however, warned that the future health of banks in an era of financial deregulation requires legislation permitting banks to broaden their business activities.

"Among the activities we would be inclined to include in this area are brokerage activites related to securities, real estate and insurance, travel agency services and data processing services," he said.

"Riskier activities, such as underwriting securities, real estate development and underwriting property, casualty and life insurance, should be placed in separate bank or holding company subsidiaries," he suggested.

He also said regulatory reforms are needed. Isaac is trying to enlist support for creation of a new agency that would assume all regulatory responsibilities over banks and thrifts. Such responsibilities are currently shared by the Controller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve, the Federal Home Loan BAnk Board, and the FDIC.

Isaac also called for the merger of the FDIC and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which insures savings and loans.

Many ways to spend that unexpected bonanza from IRS

Sylvia Porter

Many of you have just discovered that instead of owing the Internal Revenue Service money, you're in line for a tax refund.

And others are rejoicing that your refund will be more than you expected. Why this unanticipated bonanza?

First, the tax withholding tables that the IRS supplied to your employer did not fully take into consideration the tax cut that went into effect this past July 1. These tables did not reduce the withholding rate on that part of earned income over an annual rate of $27,800 for a single person. So, if you were paid more than the cutoff point for your marital status, you were overwithheld.

(Imagine, the IRS itself making an error of this sort!)

Second, you "found" money because millions of you did not change the number of your deductions to take into account your contributions to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). This strategy could reduce your taxable income by as much as $2,000 for an individual and $4,000 for a married couple both of whom work for pay. The tax benefits are expected to total $12 billion nationwide from IRA contributions.

Putting your refund into an IRA as soon as you receive it is a smart thing to do because your refund starts earning tax-free income for you immediately as well as creating a tax deduction for 1983.

You might take one of two basic approaches suggested by Prudential-Bache Securities. Under one IRA plan, you may choose from a range of legally permissible investments: individual stocks or bonds; certificates of deposit issued by banks and savings institutions guaranteed as to principal and interest by agencies of the U.S. government; or an approved limited partnership.

Under a second approach, you may choose among nine different investment funds with objectives ranging from income to growth. You can split your IRA dollars among any of the funds and transfer your assets between them to meet your changing personal financial needs.

Or you might decide to buy something you really want with your tax refund instead of investing it. For under $200, for instance, you can purchase a video disc system that takes movies from "records" and shows them on your TV screen. RCA currently has 600 titles available ranging from "Star Wars," "Casablanca," "An Officer and a Gentleman," to many children's favorites. There will be 1,000 titles by Christmas.

Or, says Larry Biehl, executive vice president of the financial advisory firm of Ballard, Biehl & Kaiser of San Mateo, Calif., there are many moves you can make with your refund keyed to the amount you get back.

If the refund is less than $100, spend it on something frivolous, a once-in-a-lifetime item, which it like the refund itself) you may never see again. Or pay for tax-planning advice, says Biehl, so you can get a refund every year.

If the refund is less than $500, do your Christmas shopping early, so you can take full advantage of sales of off-season goods. Or be practical and pay off your credit card or charge account balance.

And what if your refund ranges from $500 to $2,500? Now, let's get serious with a lump-sum bonus of that size. You might:

- Establish a college education fund for your children through either a Uniform Gift to Minors Account at your bank or a Clifford Trust. (Ask your bank for informed details; it's important.)
- Invest in a money-market account or a money-market fund or lock in today's still historically high yields by buying a top-grade long-term bond fund — consisting of tax-exempt securities if your tax bracket warrants it.
- Invest in a real estate limited partnership (shopping centers, apartments) which may throw off some deductions which can save you taxes on your next income tax return.

P.S. Or perhaps, if the refund is above $2,500, create your own "legal deferise fund" to help you argue with the IRS auditors who may become suspicious about a refund so large.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat and oats were mixed, corn lower and soybeans substantially lower at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off ¼ to up 2 cents; corn off 1¼ to 2½; oats off ½ to up 1; and soybeans off 10½ to 12¼ cents.

Soybeans broke sharply in the closing minutes with the September contract off 12¼ cents. Professionals and locals pressured the beans, triggering sell-stops on the way down. Commission house liquidation extended the losses.

It was same story in the corn pit, but not as extensive, floor sources said. Commission houses and professionals were featured sellers of corn.

Losses in the corn pit were limited by export news. South Africa bought 800,000 metric tons, South Korea was scheduled to tender Monday night for 300,000 tons and Taiwan will be in the market this week for up to 350,000 tons.

Wheat was firm in slow trading.

Survey predicts recovery

CHICAGO (UPI) — Investors believe interest rates and inflation will increase slightly this year, stock prices will continue to rise and the economy will show some recovery, a survey by the American Association of Individual Investors indicates.

The random sample of AAII members, taken in early February, was designed to obtain information on personal investment management. Of the 5,000 questionnaires distributed, more than 2,000 had been completed and tabulated by May 1.

Respondents think short- and long-term interest rates at year's end will be slightly higher than existed in early February.

Only 17 percent of those surveyed said inflation would be less in 1983 than in 1982. The average expectation of a 4.74 percent rise in consumer prices was about 20 percent higher than the 3.9 percent increase last year.

The average investor also thinks the Gross National Product, after taking inflation into account, will increase by approximately 2 percent. But very few think the economic recovery will be robust.

In answer to other questions:

• 71 percent of those surveyed thought the individual investor can outperform the professional investment manager. That does not imply they can actually beat the pros, but they at least think they can.

• 41 percent seek investment in companies that pay some cash dividends. Only 22 percent said they tend to avoid such firms.

• Three-fourths of the respondents prefer the long-term capital gains holding period be shortened and that cash dividends not be subject to federal income taxes.

• 75 percent voiced strong support for supply-side economics, saying it would be good for the economy.

It's Norwest now as firm alters name

The name change took effect May 1.

Norwest Financial specializes in consumer, business and agricultural loans, according to Patrick Claytor, the manager of the Twin Falls office, at 137 Second St. W. The firm also does some retail-sales financing, buying sales contracts from retail establishments.

The former Dial Financial Corp. has been in Twin Falls for six years, since the company purchased what was the Reliance Credit Corp. outlet in Twin Falls.

The Twin Falls office has six employees.

The name change to Norwest Financial coincides with the adoption of a new name by the parent company, Norwest Corp. of Minneapolis. Formerly known as Northwest Bancorporation, Norwest Corp. consists of 86 commercial banks, five trust companies and several financial-service subsidiaries.

Texaco finds gas in Dakota

The well, called Gin Han No. 1, tested at a daily rate of 2.98 million cubic feet of gas and 624 barrels of liquefied petroleum gas from a zone between 10,573 and 10,610 feet. The well was drilled to a total depth of 10,800 feet.

Texaco, the operator of the well, will conduct further drilling to determine the size of the new field.

Television group on block

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dun & Bradstreet Corp. has decided to sell its Corinthian television broadcasting group acquired in 1971 from the late John Hay Whitney.

Five stations will be sold fairly soon and a sixth, KHOU-TV in Houston, a CBS affiliate and the largest in the group, will be sold later. Those to be sold immediately are KOTV in Tulsa, KXTV in Sacramento, WISH-TV in Indianapolis and WANE-TV in Fort Wayne, all CBS affiliates, and WVEC-TV of Hampton-Norfolk, an ABC affiliate. The Fort Wayne station is UHF; the others VHF.

Goldman Sachs & Co. will help find buyers.

Chairman Harrington Drake said Dun & Bradstreet has made money in television but prefers to redeploy its capital into business and information services, its main activity.

Corporate profits down 8%

NEW YORK (UPI) — Corporate profits fell 8 percent from a year ago in the first quarter, the Wall Street Journal said Monday.

That wasn't nearly so bad as the 30 percent drop in the fourth quarter of last year but it was the sixth successive quarterly drop.

The regular survey covered 569 major corporations and the comparison in the first quarter this year is with a very weak quarter a year ago.

The last time the Wall Street Journal quarterly survey showed a year-to-year gain in profits was in the third quarter of 1981.

The biggest earnings drops were in steel, oil, mining, railroads, airlines and machine tool builders.

The automobile industry and banks and financial institutions were the bright spots in the survey most having gains over last year.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The elusive "average" American made $10,495 in 1981, up enough from the year before to cover the increase in prices and have a few dollars left over, the Commerce Department reports.

The average earnings of big-city dwellers went up faster during the period than the income of people who live outside the nation's largest metropolitan areas, the department said.

On a per capita basis, metropolitan residents had an average income of $11,188 — well above the national figure — while people living in less populated areas averaged only $8,382.

The report by the Bureau of Economic Analysis showed non-farm earnings increased 9.7 percent in 1981 in metropolitan counties — those included in the 305 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas, or SMSAs, where the nation's population is most heavily concentrated.

In non-metropolitan counties, non-farm earnings rose 9.2 percent from 1980 to 1981, meaning that in both areas, "earnings increased faster than the 8.5 percent national increase in consumer prices," the department said.

The report compared figures for counties located within SMSAs, regions used in many of the Census Bureau's studies, and 3,140 other counties.

Although the averages were positive, the bureau noted that non-farm earnings in the Great Lakes and Plains regions lagged behind prices. The best improvements came in the Southwest and Rocky Mountain states.

The report included figures on both nonfarm earnings and total per capita income. Figures that do not match percisely. The per capita figures include farm income, but since farm earnings fluctuate widely from year to year, they are often excluded in indentifying trends, the bureau said.

All figures were in current dollars, with no adjustment for inflation. Tables delivered with the report showed:

•National per capita income rome from $9,483 in 1980 to $10,495 in 1981, an increase if 11.7 percent.

•In non-metropolitan counties, the 1981 figure was 8,382, only 80 percent of the national average, but up 12.4 percent from the $7,516 estimated in 1980.

Among SMSAs, the five with the highest per capita income in 1981 were:

Midland, Texas, $16,467; Bridgeport-Stamford-Norwalk-Danbury, Conn., $15,697; Anchorage, Alaska, $15,563; Casper, Wyo., $14,979, and San Francisco-Oakland, Calif., $14,416;

Austin, Texas; Bismark, N.D., Charleston, W.Va.; Dayton, Ohio; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Lake Charles, La.; Racine, Wis.; Sioux Falls, S.D., and Topeka, Kan.

New census checks role in economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is conducting another census.

This one is not to count people but what they contribute to the economy in the office and on the farm.

The Census Bureau is reminding businessmen to return the questionaires that are distributed every five years to about 2 million companies.

This is only about 30 percent of all firms covered in the eventual reports but are nevertheless enough to include about 90 percent of the total volume of the nation's business.

Another 4.5 million smaller firms are not contacted directly by the government but are included in the eventual reports because analysts use data available from other government records.

The business censuses cover manufacturing, mining, contruction, retail and wholesale trade and most service industries, as well as farming and ranching.

The count of employment, payrolls, sales and products are used to make major government economic indicators more accurate, including gross national product, the producer price index and the index of industrial production.

"As individuals, we rarely think of ourselves as integral parts of the colossal production system of this country," Census Bureau Director Bruce Chapman said. "But that is exactly what we are. The economic life of the country is us."

Steady climb in gasoline prices should continue during summer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The cost of gasoline keeps climbing and the rise in pump prices should continue as the oil industry seeks to recoup the heavy losses suffered since last summer, analyst Dan Lundberg says.

The publisher of the industry's authoritative Lundberg Letter said the overall average price of gas has climbed from just under $1.12 to $1.22 a gallon since the week before the April 1 federal gas tax increase took effect. The tax increase boosted prices a nickel a gallon.

Since Lundberg's last nationwide survey April 22, the price at the pumps has increased 1.26 cents a gallon.

"The price of gasoline has gone up at the wholesale level for the sixth consecutive week and, actually, is still leading gasoline retail price increases," Lundberg said in an interview. "There is a continuing pressure on dealers to catch up to their increasing costs."

He said a major shakeup in the way the oil industry does business — including a policy of discounts for cash purchases that spawned a price war — has resulted in heavy losses since last summer.

"There was a new kind of competition with which there was no general experience," Lundberg said, adding if oil companies are "going to maintain a profitable operation, they have to turn that trend around."

He said his most recent survey indicates in the last two weeks the average overall price of gasoline nationwide at the self-service pump has:

Trinidad sugar producer may not be able to fill orders

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI) — A spokesman for Trinidad's largest sugar producer, Caroni Ltd., expressed doubts about fulfilling orders for 75,000 metric tons of raw sugar from the European Economic Community and 19,600 metric tons from the United States.

Tong Deyal said the company plans to end this year's sugar harvest on May 23, a week earlier than expected, because of a shortfall of cane supplied to the mills.

The state-owned company has also revised its overall sugar production target, reducing it from 102,000 metric tons to 81,000.

Deyal said a protracted drought and "malicious" cane fires shortened the 1983 harvest. He said 5,000 tons of sugar valued at $4 million were lost to the fires.

So far this year, Caroni has produced 74,048 metric tons of sugar from 941,384 tons of cane, Deyal said.

Two of the company's four factories are still in operation, he added.

New mutual fund may offer some cushion

By LINDA BRENNERS-STULBERG
Chicago Sun-Times

Since August, stock market investors have been on a magic carpet ride.

Now, the big question is whether a market correction will pull the rug out from under their feet.

If that happens, a new brand of mutual fund, at least in theory, should help cushion the landing.

Institutional and individual investors have poured record amounts of money into equity mutual funds, tantalized by the breathtaking aerobatics of a soaring stock market.

In the first quarter of this year alone, another $5.4 billion was pumped into equity funds. At the end of March, according to the Investment Company Institute, the aggregate assets of the funds neared $59 billion — two-thirds of all money invested in the mutual fund industry.

During the last year, many of these funds posted results exceeding the hefty gains of the Dow Jones Industrial Average and the Standard & Poor's 500 Index. But if and when a much-feared correction comes, many of the equity funds will get caught with their stocks down.

A few might emerge unscathed and at least two funds so far say they plan to make hay out of havoc.

These funds belong to the new breed of option/growth funds that strive to get maximum mileage out of options in bull and bear markets.

Most investors have neither the time, the expertise nor the money to become adequately diversified in options. But the two growth option funds (both of which charge an upfront load or sales commission) enable small investors to reap the advantages of a professionally managed portfolio of diversified options.

Two years old, the Colonial Option Growth Fund registered a 51 percent total return for 12 months ending in March, 1983, bettering the S&P 500 total return by almost 7 percent.

"We're trying to hit a lot of doubles . . . we're not necessarily swinging for the fences," said Summer Abramson, senior vice president of Colonial Management Associates, the fund's adviser. "We want a good solid performance and a lot of it will be made protecting principal on the downside."

The new kid on the block, the three-week-old Prudential-Bache Option Growth Fund, claims to be a fund for all seasons, one whose relative advantage will be most evident in a declining market. If the Securities and Exchange Commission grants approval as expected, the fund will be the first able to trade in stock-index futures and options on the stock indexes.

Shares in the fund will not be sold again until May 24, when the fund's 45-day cooling off period expires.

The objective of the open-end fund is to seek a high total return consistent with "reasonable risk."

The fund will invest in common stocks, warrants and convertible securities primarily of large companies. To reduce the market risk in a downturn, the fund will hedge its positions with a panoply of options and stock-index futures strategies. The fund also seeks to take advantage of the leverage afforded by options to take part in market advances.

"Most funds buy stocks in the hopes they will go up and that's how they make their money," noted Courtney Bellaire, portfolio manager of the Prudential-Bache Option Growth Fund. "We can make money not only in an up market, but also in a standstill or down market.

"And with the various option strategies you stack the odds a little bit more in your favor — you don't have to be quite as right in calling the market."

For example, even if a stock in the fund falls in price 10 percent, selling a call option on the stock might net a 30 percent annualized return, Bellaire says.

Over the long term, the new Prudential-Bache fund hopes to outperform the S&P 500 consistently by at least 5 percent. Because of the short-term nature of options, most of the gains will likewise be short-term, Bellaire says.

But according to Michael Lipper, president of Lipper Analytical Distributors, a service that monitors the mutual fund industry, the option growth funds are just too new to have a meaningful track record. Other fund managers, he says, are closely watching the Colonial and Prudential-Bache funds to see if they can sustain high growth rates and attract large amounts of capital.

"The options growth funds are something of a contradiction in terms," Lipper said. "To achieve growth, they'd have to sacrifice hedging and to be a true hedger fund they'd have to forfeit some growth.

"Their objective is to have the capital grow and use hedging techniques to reduce risk. That all sounds good on paper, but there's some question of their ability to deliver on that in all markets.

"What you may get is a middling sort of performance that may be absolutely perfect for the investor looking for a single fund rather than owning a couple funds and looking for moderate growth at moderate risk."

The Prudential-Bache fund may invest up to 20 percent of its total net assets to purchase puts and calls outright on stocks it does not own.

Like the Colonial Option Growth Fund, the Prudential-Bache fund intends to purchase and sell or "write" put and call options.

A call is a short-term contract (having a duration of nine months or less) conveying to the buyer, in return for a premium paid, the right to purchase the stock underlying the option at a specified price during a set time. The writer or seller of the call is obligated, upon exercise of the option, to deliver the underlying securities at the strike price. The call writer pockets the premium regardless of whether the option is exercised.

Calls are generally purchased in a rising market or when one believes the underlying stock will advance in price. If that happens, the value of the option should climb accordingly.

The buyer of a put option has the right, in return for a premium, to sell the underlying stock at the specified "strike price" during the term of the option. The writer or seller of the put keeps the premium whether or not the put is ever exercised.

The buyer of the put hopes the price of the stock goes down while the seller of the put hopes the price stays the same or increases. Conversely, on a call, the buyer hopes the price of the stock will appreciate, while the writer or seller of the call hopes the stock price remains the same or drops.

The Prudential-Bache fund's charter is unique in that it allows the fund manager, for the purposes of hedging, to buy and sell stock-index futures and options thereon.

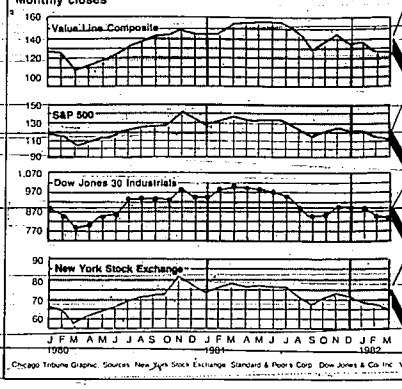
An "in-the-money" option is one where the exercise price is below the market price of the underlying stock for a call, or above the market price for a put. Conversely, an "out-of-the-money" option is one in which the strike price is above the market price for the underlying stock for a call, or below the market price of the stock for a put. The exercise price for an "at-the-money" option is the same as the market price of the underlying stock.

A "protective" put is a put purchased to protect the fund's position in such securities against a decline in market value.

Buy-and-writes are transactions wherein the Prudential-Bache fund simultaneously purchases a security and writes a call on it. The resulting combined position is commonly referred to as a covered call.

Understanding the stock indexes

Monthly closes



The Value Line Composite Stock Index consists of 1,698 stocks, most of them traded on the New York Stock Exchange. Also includes issues from the American Stock Exchange, regional markets and over-the-counter stocks. The index gives equal weight to each stock.

The Standard & Poor's 500 is composed of 400 industrial stocks, 40 financial companies, 40 utilities and 60 transportation issues. It is weighted by market value (multiplying the stock price by the number of shares outstanding).

The Dow Jones Industrial Average consists of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks. It gives greater weight to higher priced issues. Transportation and utility stocks are not included.

Mansfield advises market expansion

MIKE MANSFIELD
Advice for Japanese

By JOHN NEEDHAM
United Press International

TOKYO — U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield said Monday Tokyo should expand its markets before next year's U.S. presidential election to defuse moves aimed at keeping Japanese goods out of America.

Mansfield suggested Japan make good use of the breathing space it gained during the January summit conference between President Reagan and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in Washington.

"The big factor is time," he told UPI in an interview. "The one great achievement that Nakasone probably accomplished in the summit meeting with Reagan was time."

The 80-year-old former Senate majority leader said Congress "has been quieter than I thought it would be" concerning protectionist legislation, but Tokyo must put into effect measures already announced to let more foreign goods into Japan.

"If something substantial isn't done by the Japanese this year, next year will become the most critical year in our history, because you'll have not only congressional campaigns for the House and Senate, but a presidential campaign," he said.

"The question is, will there be time enough to allow the fleshing out and putting into effect these trade mechanisms" announced by Nakasone earlier this year, the ambassador said.

"Will we at home be a little more tolerant and understanding of the difficulties inherent in putting those trade packages into effect?"

He said most of the Democratic candidates were "talking about protectionist legislation," which would restrict the flow of imports to America to protect U.S. industries.

Mansfield, a lifelong Democrat, was retained as ambassador to Japan after Reagan took office in 1981. He has held that post since former President Carter appointed him in 1977, a record tenure for post-World War II ambassadors to Japan.

Repeating a theme he has sounded since arriving in his post, Mansfield said the Japanese "have continued their steady and significant progress over the last 13 years" on defense spending.

Despite periodic U.S. criticism that Japan holds defense spending to less than 1 percent of its gross national product, Mansfield said the real figure is higher and Japan is improving its military equipment and forces.

He noted that bases housing 48,000 U.S. military personnel in Japan are rent-free and Nakasone's government contributes $1 billion a year to their upkeep.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Your item about the mismated shoes brought back a flood of memories.

Our daughter had polio at age 2, leg braces for five years and then a series of operations. Today, at age 35, she is a successful homemaker and has a career as well. She walks normally unless in a hurry. We, too, have spent a fortune for shoes!

Ten years ago she was hurrying across the bank lobby and was greeted by a new teller who was about her age. The girl asked, "Did you have polio?" When our daughter said yes, she continued, "What sizes shoes do you wear?"

Our daughter answered, "4 1/2 and 6 1/2. What sizes do you wear?" Knowing full well that only a person similarly afflicted would ask such a question, the teller answered, "Same sizes — opposite feet!"

They have been solemates every since, exchanging dozens of pairs of shoes. Sign us ...

— FOOTLOOSE AND ALMOST FANCY FREE IN ALABAMA

DEAR FOOTLOOSE: Wonderful story! And for those who may have missed the item: For information on how to "register" for shoes when the left foot is not the same size as the right, write to: Jeanne L. Sallmin, Odd Shoe Exchange, Rural Route 4, Indianola, Iowa 50125.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both 25. We have a 4-year-old son we love a lot. I consider our marriage a good one with one exception.

Whenever I get really mad at my husband, I start throwing punches and fight like the devil. When I start hitting him, he hits back, and pretty soon the two of us are slugging it out for all we're worth. Meanwhile our son is watching the whole ugly battle. Soon he is hitting his father to stop him from hurting me.

My husband feels bad when his son strikes him, and I feel worse because I know I started the whole thing.

I value our son's personality and character, and I pray that what he witnesses on occasion will not affect him emotionally. We are really a loving family except for these fights we have occasionally.

Please tell me where to go for help to control my terrible temper.

— A RAGING FOOL

DEAR RAGING: Call your local mental health association and find out where there is a clinic near you.

Both you and your husband need to learn how to control your aggressive behavior, not only for the sake of your marriage, but because of the effect it is bound to have on your son.

Children who witness violence at home grow up to believe that it is an acceptable way to deal with their anger and hostility. You are wise to realize that you need help. Please don't delay.

DEAR ABBY: It's my turn to air my gripe. I am a single young woman who is a secretary. Where I work, whenever someone leaves the company, we give that person a little going-away party. This involves punch, a cake, gift, etc. Anyway, it's up to the secretaries to see that the work gets done. This includes collecting money for the cake, gift, etc.

There are 64 people in this office, and about one-third of the people here do not donate a dime, but they are the ones who take the biggest piece of cake and have the largest signature on the card!

Today I tried to collect from the penny-pinchers (after the party was enjoyed by all) and got a lot of sour looks and excuses.

Any suggestions?

— MONEY COLLECTOR

DEAR COLLECTOR: Perhaps this is one custom whose time has come — and gone. Instead of the entire office enjoying a "going-away" party for which a third do not contribute, perhaps just the close friends of the honored one could organize a no-host private luncheon. Suggest it.

DEAR ABBY: About picking one's teeth in public: The only socially acceptable time to pick one's teeth is when selecting dentures.

— SOUTHERNER

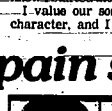
Arthritis pain sounds like milk allergy



Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you said that calcium does not cause or worsen arthritis. I presume you mean it is OK for elderly people to drink milk or eat cheese.

I like both. Unfortunately after drinking milk for a few days or eating cheese, I get arthritic pains in my wrist, thumb and joints. After omitting the milk and cheese for a few days the arthritis eases and I have no pains in my joints.

I am not saying it is the calcium but the pain has come and gone in relationship to my drinking milk and eating cheese. Just when I think I have been free of pain long enough and I could go back to milk, I try it and it brings back the pain in the joints.

My general health is excellent except for this problem. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER — I would suggest that your reaction is not related to calcium at all.

First, it is important to define what you really have. Joint pains don't always mean arthritis. Your story is not really suggestive of arthritis anyway.

But your story could suggest an allergy to milk. Food allergies are more important than many people realize. Since the allergic reaction is really dependent upon some substance, in this case something in milk, reacting with an antibody in your body, there can be many different symptoms.

Your allergic antibody can be fixed in any tissues in your body. If it is in the skin, you will have hives when you consume the offending food. If it is in the intestine, you will have intestinal symptoms. And if the allergy antibody is fixed in your joint tissues, the offending food would cause joint symptoms.

This kind of allergy to milk is not the same thing as intolerance to milk sugar, called lactose intolerance.

I am sending you The Health Letter 19-12, Food Allergies, for a more complete explanation of how allergies can cause many symptoms. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Why not ask your doctor to refer you to an allergist. He may be able to help you.

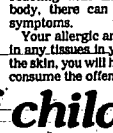
DEAR DR. LAMB — I was reading an article about the popularity of hot tubs, steam rooms and sauna baths. At the end of the article the writer said that persons with any history of angina, hypertension or respiratory problems should use these with care, and only with the consent of their physician.

I would appreciate your comment on this as it should be informative to many of your readers.

DEAR READER — The statement is correct. Your body constantly generates heat and the heat must be eliminated. If it isn't you would develop a fever or dangerous high temperature. Your heart works hard to send blood to your skin and cool it and reduce body heat. Your arteries dilate to send more blood to the skin. You've noticed the flushing that occurs when you are hot.

It may not be so easy to reverse the dilatation of the arteries if the blood pressure drops suddenly. So heat is fun and comfortable, but it must be treated with respect. If your heart and lungs are already working with a handicap, you have to be careful not to add additional stress and overload its capacity.

Dream of child world was nightmare



Erma Bombeck
At wit's end

I had a dream the other night that I can't get out of my mind. The adults of the world became the children and the children ran the world.

It was terrible, standing down there wedged among all those knees. I couldn't get a drink of water, mail a letter, or open a door. Cars were even worse. If you didn't kill yourself getting to a window you just sat there on the seat with your legs sticking straight out, staring at the back of the seat.

Every once in awhile, the child driving would say, "You sit down or you're going to break your neck. You know I can't drive and yell at you at the same time." But that wasn't true.

At the supermarket, I was just standing there when without a warning, someone whipped me off the floor and forced my legs through a grocery cart seat that was so cold my teeth frosted up.

I never got introduced. Sometimes, someone would say, "Oh, is this your youngest parent ... or your only girl?" Or someone would say how much you looked like someone, but for all purposes, I had no name.

I took naps when I wasn't sleepy, ate when I wasn't hungry, had sweaters put on me when I wasn't cold and got thrown into swimming pools when I didn't want to swim.

I was tossed into the air when I had an upset stomach, forced to go to the bathroom whether I had to go or not, and ordered to stop crying when I had a perfectly good reason for doing it.

There were apartments with signs on the lawn that said, "NO PETS OR ADULTS." There were movies and rides that announced, "ADULTS MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY CHILDREN 12 YEARS OR UNDER."

Occasionally, everyone would laugh and when I asked what they were laughing about, they would say, "We'll tell you when you're younger."

I never did anything right. I played with chewing gum, wiped my hands off on my dress, leaned back on chairs, made faces in the toaster, and sniffed instead of using a handkerchief. Once when I came into the kitchen with a comb in my hand, I thought life was all over.

I crayoned when I was supposed to, played with strangers when I was told to, and washed my hands 50 million times a day. I was "seen a lot and not heard," given reasons of "Because I said so, that's why" and told with regularity, "You should have gone before you left home."

But the worst part was that people kept telling me, "This is the best part of your life, so enjoy it."

Fashion shows a scramble

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Among the most glamorous jobs in the world is one in the fashion industry. Right?

Seeing all those beautiful new clothes, or if you're a model wearing them ahead of everyone else, is the epitome of what every woman desires. Right?

WRONG. On all counts.

Ask those who have been involved in the last two weeks of New York designer-manufacturers showings of their fall and winter collections to the nation's buyers and press.

The openings long since have outgrown the showrooms in the skyscraper buildings clustered on New York's Seventh Avenue. So, many designers moved their opening shows to hotel ballrooms, a television studio, and for the first time in my memory to the 7th Regiment Armory where designer Ralph Lauren had temporary bleachers erected for the capacity audience.

No wonder seasoned reporters have tossed chic aside for comfort and safety. I wear sturdy walking shoes; another veteran has switched to sneakers, and several reporters appeared in jogging shoes.

No one took a fall in the armory's bleacher seats, 15 tiers of them, even though many women teetered on high heels and needed help getting down when the show ended.

I was sitting next to a sharply angled runway ramp in the television studio where Mary McFadden held her show. A model coming off the runway fell down the ramp. Fortunately, she was not hurt, just frightened. Studio technicians hastily put masking tape on the ramp to provide more traction and dispatched a couple of ushers to help the models off.

But for the rest of that show, you could see terror registered on the face of every model as she approached the ramp. The hazard was corrected for later showings.

More designers are holding special openings. One week there were 42. They're scheduled back to back, never start on time, and overlap constantly.

Then there is the matter of travel time. Since the shows no longer are centered in the garment district, you can't walk from one building to the next show practically next door.

In showroom or television studio, the packs of people are incredible because the foreign fashion press and buyers from western Europe and Japan particularly have "discovered" American manufacturers. So they come to see and order.

Television also has discovered fashion and now, trying to reach your assigned seat, inevitably means tripping over camera cables. "Assigned" seat means very little in a crowded showroom, even though you've made reservations weeks ahead.

The art of seat switching has become a very sophisticated one. Name plates usually are nothing more than tiny cards attached by transparent tape to the backs of folding chairs. Somehow the writing is always small; no big, bold scrawl to help you locate yourself.

Adele Simpson uses three-by-five inch cards and just places them on the chair seats. Her showroom staff has charts of where each person is seated.

This system usually works smoothly, but at this season's opening one of the staff got a laugh when he took the microphone to ask, "Who's sitting on June Weir?" Miss Weir is with the New York Times.

If you get time to eat at all during a day that may start as early as 9:00 a.m. (that means you'd better arrive around 8:30 to locate your chair) and lasts sometimes until 9:00 p.m., it is something bought from a street vendor. But you don't lose weight; you're usually grabbing junk food.

If one doesn't already have claustrophobia, Seventh Avenue will give it to you. Overcrowded elevators go with the overcrowded showrooms and sometimes freight elevators are put into use. Maybe not a glamorous way to go, but it gets you there.

By JULIE HATFIELD
Boston Globe

BOSTON — High school seniors (and sometimes lucky sophomores and juniors) all over are preparing for what is for most of them the most formal and special occasion of their young lives: the senior prom.

And this year, in what could be called a backlash to a lengthy period of dressing down for proms, the young men and women graduating from high school are showing a fresh and vigorous interest in formality.

Coming around full circle to the dress-up mood of the '50s, the 1983 teenagers are expressing a desire to be as traditionally proper and formal in their prom wear as we were back then, when the required pastel strapless net formal and black tuxedo hung in waiting for the big night in just about every closet in the country.

More sophisticated taffeta gowns have replaced the frothy nets, and better haircuts have replaced the prison camp looks of the guys; but beyond that, if you look in on a 1983 prom, you might receive a heavy dose of nostalgia for the good old days because they have, in their own way, returned.

Prom night, for the guys, is every bit as special and dressed up as it is for the girls. Just because the fellas don't have to go through the ritual of combing the stores for prom gowns doesn't mean they are not thinking about their fashion image on the night of the big dance.

"They've gone conservative," noted Pat Giallongo, manager of Mr. Tux, describing this year's senior high school boys. "Those baby blue tuxes are all gone this year, and they're back to black dinner jackets and white shirts with no ruffles but wing pleats and turned-down collars instead. A lot of the boys are wearing red cummerbunds and ties for a slight change, he said, and a lot are going to tuxedos with designer names rather than the standard no-name tux.

Giallongo said there are not quite as many tails and top hats leaving the shop this spring, and he added that the trend back to conservative and black was easier on the girls, who then can wear any color they wish without worrying about clashing.

"Prom night is the most important night of her life to a girl of that age," said Karen McCrea, Jordan Marsh's divisional merchandise manager for juniors, "and she wants to look like a princess."

Evidently, taffeta is what makes a girl feel like a princess. That is the No. 1 fabric for prom dresses this year, and it is a change from all the cottons and slinky chiffons of the past few years. McCrea decided to go to her teen board of high school girls in the fall to let them — rather than just the store buyers — decide exactly what the store should offer a girl for prom night.

"It worked," McCrea said. Her teen board chose taffeta above all else, and the best-seller in the store is a pearl-edged long taffeta gown by Gunne Sax, at $94.

"They didn't want something that had been around a lot," McCrea said. "This age does not think about wedding gowns or other important gowns; they consider the prom gown the most special dress they think they will ever have, and price is not a big consideration. Our price range — $60 to $120 — was not important to them. By last November, five out of our board of 25 girls had already chosen their prom gowns.

"After taffeta, organza is next most popular, followed by lace. They specifically did not want polyester or voile. They wanted a white dress, or pink, or blue, but nothing in green or yellow."

Some of the prom gowns at Lord & Taylor even have their own hoops for emphasizing the fitted waist, full-skirted look. The very formal lacy dress is a definite move away from the slinky polyester prom gowns of past years.

Filene's junior dress salespeople noted, too, the prevalence of taffeta, romantic puff sleeves, off-shoulder gowns and sweetheart necklines. Gunne Sax is still the biggest selling manufacturer there, followed by Roberta, a company that makes taffeta dresses.
